New budget crisis at Jubilee

'No fat' estimate tops $50M

The Royal Jubilee Hospital's faces yet another budget crisis.

The board Thursday night set spending for the period from April, 1980, to April, 1981, at $51.2 million — $700,000 more than the provincial government is willing to pay.

And there are indications, the budget could jump by around another $5 million.

Contract talks involving nurses and members of the Hospital Employees Union could add an estimated 10 per cent to the budget.

At present, the spending plans contain no provision for wage increases or fringe benefits.

RJH board chairman Eric Simmons said today his board has to have the $51.2 million.

"We need that kind of money for the programs," Simmons said.

"The budget is sound, there is no fat in it and we believe we can prove that it is needed.

"Every program is important for the health of the public."

Simmons said the budget went to the health ministry today and he expects Norman Alban, the hospital's acting director of finances, will meet with hospital services' personnel to argue for the $51.2 million budget.

Simmons said the board is quite prepared to defend the budget with ministry officials.

Simmons said the nurses and hospital employees' contracts will undoubtedly end in additional costs.

"To try and put a percentage increase is very difficult," Simmons said.

"But there is some indication that it could well be 10 per cent."

Dr. Elinor Powell, chief of RJH's medical staff, said today she is confident the provincial government will approve the budget.

She said the recent relationship between RJH and the health ministry has been excellent and the ministry has appeared anxious to support the hospital's programs.

An ugly, happy reunion

SURREY (CP) — Ugliness has brought happiness to a Surrey woman.

When Joan Priddle first saw pictures of Melville Taylor mugging for an English photographer in a recent edition of the New Westminster Columbian, she thought: "What an ugly mug."

Her interest turned to shock, however, when she realized the "ugly mug" was her brother whom she had not seen in 34 years.

"I was flabbergasted," she said. "Who would ever have looked for a brother making a face like that?"

Taylor, billed as the "ugliest man in Britain," often entertains for charity by pulling his face out of shape. The pictures were carried in newspapers across England and North America.

Ms. Priddle, who last saw her brother before the family was separated at the end of the Second World War, said she had given up hope of locating him until she saw the pictures.

Ms. Priddle, 54, who lives on a disability pension as a result of a heart attack, couldn't afford a phone call to England so she asked for help from the newspaper.

Patrons in a pub in Taylor's hometown, Padiham, Lancashire, said Taylor didn't have a phone. However, reporters from a local newspaper found Taylor and arranged a long-distance telephone reunion.

U.S. prices jumped 13% during 1979

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices in the U.S. soared 13.3 per cent in 1979, the largest annual increase in 33 years, the government reported today.

The price surge, largely from energy and housing costs, far surpassed the 1978 gain of 9 per cent and the 4.8 per cent rate of 1976, the year before President Carter entered the White House.

It was the highest inflation jump in prices since the government removed Second World War price controls.

Gold slumps

LONDON (AP) — Gold prices fell again today, declining to $668 U.S. — $773 Canadian — by the afternoon fix in London from a closing price of $717 on Thursday.

Exxon breaks $4B earnings barrier

NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp., the largest oil company in the United States, has become the first industrial company ever to earn more than $4 billion in a single year.

Exxon disclosed its earnings in a report today which showed the company enjoyed a 60-per-cent earnings gain for the fourth quarter of 1979 and an over-all 55-per-cent increase for the year over 1978 results.

The report followed announcements by several other major oil companies that the 1979 world oil price explosion resulted in sharply higher profits, with much of the earnings gains coming from operations overseas.

Exxon said its profits for the year totalled $4.295 billion, or $9.74 a share, up from $2.763 billion or $6.20 a share in 1978. Revenues rose 30 per cent to $84.350 billion.

For the fourth quarter, Exxon said its profits totalled $1.365 billion, or $3.10 a share, up from $853 million or $1.92 a share in the same period of 1978.

On Thursday, Texaco Inc., the third-largest oil company, and Gulf Oil Corp., ranked fifth, said their 1979 gains came after several years of lackluster performance.

Return on shareholders' equity for Gulf was 16.3 per cent in 1979, while Texaco's was 17.7 per cent. The average U.S. manufacturing company earned 16.7 per cent on shareholder's equity in the first nine months of 1979 the U.S. Federal Trade Commission says.

Texaco's fourth-quarter earnings rose 62.6 per cent to $533.9 million, or $1.97 a share, compared with $328.3 million, or 1.21 a share, a year before. Earnings for 1979 were $1.8 billion, or $6.48 a share, against $852.5 million, or $3.14 a share, in 1978.

Fourth-quarter earnings at Gulf were up by 54.4 per cent at $366 million, or $1.88 a share, compared with $237 million, or $1.22 a share, a year before. Earnings for 1979 were $1.32 billion, or $6.78 a share, up from $785 million, or $4.03 a share, in 1978.

Broken nose in purse grab

A 63-year-old woman received a fractured left wrist and broken nose in an attack by two young purse snatchers in Victoria Thursday night.

The suspects are believed to be about 10 or 12 years old.

Police said Mrs. Gladys Rogers was crossing the intersection at Tolmie and Rutledge when the two youngsters attacked her from behind.

They knocked her down and grabbed her purse containing about $4 - $5.

Mrs. Rogers, confined to bed in her apartment at 212-3244 Quadra, said in an interview today her face hit the curb when she fell.

The next thing she remembers was a woman stopping her car and helping her to her feet.

"I didn't get a good look but I guess by their size they were 10 or 12 years old," she said.

The incident occurred about 5:45 p.m. as Mrs. Rogers was walking home from shopping at the nearby Mayfair shopping centre.

The unidentified motorist drove Mrs. Rogers to her apartment where the apartment manager contacted Saanich police.

An officer took Mrs. Rogers to Royal Jubilee Hospital where she was treated and released.

The two boys ran east on Tolmie towards Finlayson and disappeared.

Mrs. Rogers said she only had two $2 bills and some change in her purse but is more concerned about the loss of all her identification papers.

Meanwhile her doctor has told her she will have to keep the cast on her wrist six to eight weeks.

Seattle rocked by blast

SEATTLE (AP) — An explosion, [illegible] off by gasoline fumes from a parking garage, shattered windows in an office building and rocked an area of downtown Seattle today.

No injuries were reported, said police Patrolman Don Phifer.

The explosion, in a parking garage which is part of the 23-storey Pacific Building in the heart of downtown, showered the street with shards of glass.

Vern Hindmarsh, building manager, said that at about 6 a.m., building operators discovered that vandals had punctured four gasoline tanks on vehicles at various levels of the parking garage.

Fumes from spilled gasoline drifted down through the garage to the ground floor lobby area, where they were ignited, possibly by electricity, Hindmarsh said.

"The concussion blew me out the front doors," said Hindmarsh, who was unhurt. The explosion occurred at about 6:55 a.m., he said.

Damage appeared extensive inside the lobby and glass was blown across the four-lane street. A ground-floor branch of Old National Bank had six-metre windows broken.

Hindmarsh said there was no immediate damage estimate.

At least two other persons were in the building at the time of the explosion.

Lonzo Fanony said he was in the Japan Line U.S.A. Ltd. office on the 22nd floor and "didn't know anything was going on."

He and another employee, who was not immediately identified, walked down the stairs and through a front emergency exit.

All persons who were in the building at the time have been accounted for, authorities said.

S. African police storm abductors

PRETORIA, South Africa [illegible] firing machine guns stormed a bank and killed three black nationalists who had seized 25 hostages in a bid to win the release of South African political prisoners, authorities said.

Two women hostages were also killed and seven other hostages and two policemen were injured, officials reported.

The building was rocked by an explosion after police rushed it. Officers later said one of the gunmen had detonated a hand grenade. The blacks were also reported armed with automatic rifles.

A policeman ran out of the bank with blood on his hands screaming: "My wife has been shot!" Several hostages were carried away on stretchers.

It was the first time blacks in South Africa have taken hostages to try to win the release of political prisoners.

Shrieks of terror — soon drowned out by the roar of machine gun fire — were heard inside the bank as police SWAT teams stormed inside, ending the siege six hours after it began.

Several people ran or stumbled out of the bank, bleeding and clutching wounds as the sound of automatic weapons filled the air.

The siege began at 1:05 p.m. when three gunmen armed with hand grenades and Soviet-made AK-47 assault rifles stormed the bank and took between 20 and 40 persons hostage to demand the release of black nationalist prisoners held in South African jails.

About 30 minutes after seizing the bank, the gunmen released assistant manager J.S. Whitmore and a woman employee with a note containing their demands, a Volkskas official said.

Some 90 minutes later, they freed two more bank employees, who emerged from the front door of the three-story building stripped to their waists.

"The terrorists have not occupied the bank to stage a robbery as their demands are political," said Dr. D.P.S. Van Huyssteen, director of the bank.

Van Huyssteen said the note they sent with the first two hostages demanded the release of black nationalist prisoners in South African jails. He would not disclose how many prisoners the gunmen were demanding be released.

But another security source said the prisoners wanted freed included the [illegible]cal prisoner, Nelson Mandela, father of black nationalism in white-minority-ruled South Africa. They demanded that they and the prisoners then be flown to Angola, the source said.

Police confirmed only that the release of a prominent political prisoner had been demanded.

Mandela, 61, was convicted of trying to overthrow the white government and has been held for 17 years at the Robben Island prison in Cape Town's Table Bay, on the southwest coast.

Officials cordoned off the area around the bank and police snipers and SWAT teams surrounded the building, negotiating with the gunmen for about six hours.

Airliner hijacked to Cuba

ATLANTA (AP) — Two hijackers believed armed and claiming to be Black Muslims commandeered a Delta Air Lines jet carrying more than 60 persons from Atlanta to New York early today.

They forced the plane to fly to Havana where they demanded another plane to take them to Iran.

State department spokesman David Passage said in Washington that the hijackers asked Cuban authorities to provide them with a plane to Tehran, but the Cubans refused. Delta said the hijacked plane, a wide-bodied L-1011, was not equipped to cross the ocean.

FBI agent Welton Merry in Miami said: "At least two of the passengers have been identified as hiajckers, They claim to be Black Muslims and they want to go to Tehran."

There were reports the hijackers carried a gun or a bomb. Merry said his only definite word was that they were armed with "real weapons."

Nearly five hours after Flight 1116 landed at Havana's Jose Martinez Airport at 1:03 a.m. PST, its doors remained shut and Passage said the only person allowed off was one unidentified diabetic passenger who was taken to a Havana hospital.

There were no reports of injuries.

Oil risk above politics

The threat posed by oil tankers to the coastline and marine life of B.C. should be above party politics, Esquimalt-Saanich Liberal candidate Gerry Kristianson said today in a speech critical of his own party.

He proposed a 13-member international committee of Canadians and Americans to find the best method of handling the crisis.

In the address to the Victoria Lady Laurier club — a Liberal women's organization — Kristianson said that since President Carter announced he is backing the Northern Tier pipeline proposal, a number of Canadian politicians and parties have tried to gain some partisan advantage out of it.

(Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau last week blamed Prime Minister Joe Clark's foot-dragging on the all Canadian pipeline proposal for Carter's decision, which will bring oil supertankers from Alaska down the B.C. coast.)

"This is unfortunate. No party's record on this issue is unblemished, and I include the Liberal party in this statement," Kristianson said.

"Furthermore, British Columbia's interests are not well-served either by irresponsible suggestions of an economic boycott of the U.S.A. or by foolish proposals to keep tankers more than 200 miles offshore.

"Threats of blackmail against the United States are particularly inappropriate in light of the problems faced by the Americans in Iran and Afghanistan . . . This is the time for constructive proposals, not anti-American invective," he said.

The candidate's proposal would see the matter referred to an international committee composed of the federal environment minister, the secretary of the interior (his U.S. counterpart), Premier Bill Bennett and NDP leader Dave Barrett, the governor of Washington and an elected state representative, three B.C. MPs and two federal politicians from Washington, as well as the mayors of Seattle and Vancouver.

Kristianson said it would have two major roles, mobilizing expert resources to help choose the best course of action and gathering public opinion behind the solution to convince the national governments of Canada and the U.S. to listen to the people of Pacific Northwest.

Stern, stolid, stony: a perfect setting

TORONTO — It has always struck me that the awkward pile of stone called the Royal York Hotel, the most famous hotel in the land, epitomizes the Canadian character: it is stern, stolid and full of empty spaces.

Bellboys have been known to have gone missing for up to three weeks in the cavernous corridors and there are three refugees from the last Grey Cup still in one of the basement bars, pouring over a map as to how to get out.

The old hotel huddles in its Presbyterian, gothic splendor at the foot of Toronto across from soot-stained Union Station, the two of them encompassing the solid virtues that have made central Canada the beloved leader of us all.

It's appropriate that on one day, separated merely by the oil tanker-length of a foyer, both the man who is trying to take Canada apart and the man who is desperately trying to paste it together would be shouting their messages from opposite ends of the carpet.

Prime Minister Joe Clark, who is mostly trying to paste himself together these days, tried his pitch at breakfast and Premier Rene Levesque tried his at lunch and almost nobody shifted his brain cells. Royal York stolidity triumphed once again.

It takes a loyal Tory to endure Joe Clark for breakfast along with the scrambled eggs. But long before 8 a.m., the earnest men in dark suits who keep this city's economy afloat were scurrying out of the concrete burrows that now thrust Torontonians below the frost level.

The PM had delivered a vigorous sermon the previous night before a Tory mob in the suburb of Scarborough, but now it seemed as if the reality of all those polls had intruded on his sleep and the futility of it all had set in.

As the attention of the audience began to meander, an agitated young man in a windbreaker began shouting at the startled Clark. "Take your gloves off, Joe," he pleaded. "You're going to lose your job!"

As a political analyst, the chap seemed to have a tighter grasp on the news than the mesmerized Tory troupe that is still going through the sleep-walking ritual of insisting a win is possible. The Conservative-in-a-windbreaker had a greater sense of urgency than the total entourage.

The PM then proceeded to a high school where he told the subdued students: "We have taken away from Rene Levesque the easy target of an Ottawa he can attack," explaining that relations with Quebec were now much better.

That claim, however brave, is news to Levesque himself who several hours later, at the opposite end of the hotel's convention floor, dismissed the Clark regime with a wave of the hand and said "no progress of any significance has been made in the last year" and "I don't have to tell you why."

The Levesque foray into this milk-fed home of mammon came as the Empire and Canadian clubs combined to provide an audience for a man who wishes to abolish both their titles.

While the Clark Tories, perhaps 700 strong, gathered under tinkling chandeliers, every businessman in Toronto who could afford a three-piece haircut was out and they jammed the modern mahogany-and-aluminum room (again, fitting) to a total of a good 1,200.

When it gets down to basics, the business community takes more seriously the Premier of Quebec than it does the Prime Minister of Canada.

Levesque — calmly reading from a text this time with little of his usual extemporaneous passion — laid down his stubborn litany: "The principle of duality cannot exist within federalism." A new partnership — "not a rupture but a partnership" — will evolve.

If these powerful businessmen from the most powerful city are rather stunned and disheartened at Levesque's polite but adamant resolve, they might muse on the fact that the anglophone segment of Canada — their segment — hasn't provided a single outstanding spokesman who is even participating in this election.

Unions get WCB extension

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor groups have been granted a two-month extension to April 15 to prepare briefs opposing changes to Workers' Compensation Board occupational health hazard categories.

Included in the changes is one that would prohibit a fireman from claiming compensation if he suffered lung or heart problems or a heart attack more than two days after fighting a fire.

Unions, who say the plan is a retrograde step because it forces the employee to prove that the disease or injury is job-related, have demanded the resignation of board chairman Dr. Adam Little.

Little also came under attack from the B.C. Federation of Labor which says he cares more about saving money than saving lives.

The federation was commenting on figures released Thursday by the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers (CAIMAW) which showed that, on the average, permanently-disabled workers receive 35 per cent less in lump sum pensions than they did five years ago.

Board spokesman Grant McMillan said the reductions are a result of board policy changes to reduce the inflation factor caculated on lump sum payments.

"Taking pensions indexed to increases in the cost of living away from permanently-disabled workers is like taking white canes away from blind people," CAIMAW spokesman Cathy Walker said of a proposal by the B.C. Construction Association.

The association proposed to the cabinet Tuesday that the burden of the WCB's unfunded deficit — $227 million in 1978 and expected to be more in 1979 — be placed on taxpayers rather than employers as is the current practice.

The association blamed unsatisfied claims and pension indexing for the major part of the deficit."

Family Act back in court

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's controversial Family Relations Act is back in the courts again, this time in the B.C. Court of Appeal.

The government has asked the high court to rule on the validity of clauses of the legislation ruled unconstitutional last October by B.C. Supreme Court Justice H. E. Hutcheon.

Justice Hutcheon ruled the clauses invalid because they conferred on provincial court judges powers that traditionally belonged to judges of the superior courts.

He said provincial court judges had no jurisdiction over child custody, occupancy of the family home or to issue orders keeping one parent away from the family home.

400 job openings in coal expansion

VANCOUVER (CP) — The existing Fording River coal mine near Elkford in southeastern British Columbia will be expanded in a new $115 million program which will create 400 new jobs, Fording Coal Ltd. and the provincial government announced Thursday.

The expanded part of the operation is scheduled to begin production in late 1982. Production capacity will increase to five million tons a year from three million tons.

The B.C. government is pressing Ottawa for the expansion of coal port facilities on the West Coast.

$7.6M in losses?

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Fibreco Export Inc. says it lost wood chip export business worth $7.6 million because of the loss of the Canadian National Railways bridge over Burrard Inlet and the B.C. Railway strike which lasted five weeks.

When the rail bridge between Vancouver and North Vancouver was knocked out Oct. 12 by a Japanese freighter, Fibreco turned to B.C. Rail which it hoped could increase deliveries to North Vancouver, but the railway's 2,200 employees went on strike Dec.

Hoarding reasons

A Saanich homeowner's refusal to take an unexplained 'no' for an answer appears once again to have put municipal council and a quasi-judicial creature known as the the Board of Variance at loggerheads.

Council's frustration, to say nothing about residents' frustration, comes from the board's stubborn insistence that reasons for its decisions remain secret.

The homeowner in question wanted to enclose a sundeck on the back of his house. Before a building permit could be issued, the man needed the approval of the Board of Variance because the proposed structure violated a municipal zoning bylaw.

Boards of Variance perform a vital function in each organized area of the province. In municipalities the boards consist of five people — two appointed by the municipal affairs minister, two appointed by council and one appointed by the other four appointees.

This unpaid body acts as an arbitration board between land owners and municipal enforcement officers who find themselves in conflict over zoning bylaws. Without the Board of Variance, muncipal councils and possibly the courts would be dealing with numerous cases in which land owners want to undertake construction that is in some detail in conflict with the applicable zoning bylaws.

Most problems referred to the Board involve setbacks — how far from a property line a building can be constructed. Anyone who alleges that the enforcement of a zoning bylaw with respect to siting, size, or shape of a structure causes him undue hardship can appeal to the board. Before allowing exceptions to a zoning bylaw the board is obliged to inform nearby residents that the appeal is before it.

This particular Saanich resident appealed and was turned down. When he tried to find out why, the only reason he was given was that the structure was unnecessary. As far as he could determine, none of his neighbors was opposed.

Naturally he was annoyed, and when he recounted the story to council, some of the aldermen were also angry. In defiance of the Board of Variance, council issued the man a development permit to build his enclosure.

For Mayor Mel Couvelier, this incident brought back a flood of bad memories. Two years ago, he says, the conflict between the board and council over the board's secretive nature reached a "crisis", but there was no resolution to the dispute.

Couvelier notes that by circumventing the Board of Variance council is undermining the purpose and authority of the Board. However, he says the dispute would ease if reasons were given for decisions.

At a time when local government is attempting to be more open and straightforward with the public, the Board of Variance's secrecy seems archaic.

Walkabout this

Educators in the American mid-west have taken up the challenge of Challenge Education (CE).

CE is touted as a revolutionary concept designed to give high school students greater responsibility for what they learn and how they learn it. An education professor at Simon Fraser University, Dr. Maurice Gibbons, was largely responsible for the idea.

The concept has been compared to the Australian aboriginal rite of passage to manhood known as walkabout. CE puts an onus not only on the acquisition of skills and information, but also on personal growth and development. Motivation, initative and responsibility, are developed by guiding students to learn on their own.

A colleague of Gibbons at Simon Fraser, Dr. Gary Philips has been chosen to head a team of educators who start a three-year developmental program this year at several high schools in the mid-western United States.

Player says that where CE has been tried there has been a tremendous improvement in student performance when compared to traditional school systems. He says CE incorporates a number of radical innovations including students assuming responsiblity for their own learning, learning through rigorous experience as well as formal studies, giving parents a more active role and challenging students to perform as adults to earn the right graduate.

Player also notes that it's a shame a few B.C. schools haven't incorporated some of Gibbons' ideas. "This is an example of a Canadian idea that the Americans have seized upon for their own benefits."

Perhaps the provincial education minister will consider it enough of a challenge to find out how CE works in U.S. high schools.

RICHARD GWYN

A last, best, long chance

TORONTO — In his suite at the Royal York Hotel, sipping a long, pale scotch and water, and staring morosely at the TV set on which the news announcer has just read off the latest poll, sits John Carnell Crosbie. You wonder how he can see the set through his three-quarter closed eyes.

When the news item is over, Crosbie takes another sip, and wriggles his bare toes. Then he turns to the reporter present, and says, "I'm a combative fellow, so some of what I'm doing I'd be doing anyway. But I'm really doing it because if those polls are right, this election will turn out to be a victory for the most immoral, the most cynical, the most sleazy politicking this country has ever been put to."

He responds to a question. Yes, he's experienced the roughest of politicking before, when he battled former Newfoundland Premier Joey Smallwood a decade ago. "But this is different. The Liberals know perfectly well what has to be done to get our economy in shape. They're lying, and if they get away with it they'll put an end forever to any attempt to talk to the public honestly, truthfully, factually. Conservatives are not angels, but we have tried to be honest."

No angel

Crosbie himself is certainly no angel. He's a bare-knuckle politician, who respects that quality in others, such as ex-Liberal cabinet minister Marc Lalonde of whom he says, "He has a fine, vicious streak in him."

Think of Crosbie instead as a pocket-battleship whom the party has sent to fire his broadsides deep into the heart of the enemy territory — up and down the Golden Horseshoe of Southern Ontario and in and out of Metro Toronto.

Crosbie is Joe Clark's last, best chance. But at best, a long, long chance.

Among the many ironies in this election, the most ironic, surely, is that the government was defeated because of its budget, and as a consequence is about to be defeated in this election, and yet the most popular politician in the election is the author of that budget.

Even to non-partisan audiences such as the Canadian Club of Toronto, Crosbie is introduced as "a man of integrity." The audiences he draws are as large as those of any of the leaders — 1,200 at the Canadian Club luncheon, 700 for breakfast the same day, 800 at a University of Toronto bear-pit session the same afternoon, 1,200 for a public rally in Toronto's Willowdale riding the same evening.

Crosbie is popular because he's new and different. "Canada's first ethnic finance minister," he calls himself. He's popular because in an English-Canadian political landscape that these days seems to be peopled by pygmies, he stands out, like a sleepy-eyed Buddha, as a large (214 pounds), self-confident presence. He's popular, lastly and mostly, because he's outrageous.

JOHN CROSBIE
. . . no angel, but honest

He's outrageous about his opponents. Trudeau and the Liberals are "Disco-Daddy and the Has-Beens." Ed Broadbent is "Ed Broadbluff . . . his promises are all bluffs because he knows he's never going to have to implement them." Trudeau is, "Count Dracula . . . he's sucked the lifeblood out of our economic system," or, now that he's promised to double-track the CNR rail line, "Sir John A. Trudeau . . . He's going to clear away the Rockies."

As outrageous, for a politician, Crosbie tells his audiences the truth, or at least a respectable portion of the truth.

About energy. "As sure as the sun rises, energy prices will rise. You know that. With us, at least you know what those increases will be. With the others you don't know because they aren't honest enough to tell you."

About budget deficits. "We're soggy with deficits. If deficits were so stimulative, how come after $46 billion worth in the last six years, we have all this unemployment, all this inflation?"

His audiences — 500 in St. Catherines the morning after his day in Toronto, 1,000 at Brantford for lunch, 1,000 for an evening rally in Cambridge — wriggle in their seats waiting for the one-liners, sit respectfully through the parts where Crosbie lays down the economic law, and then give him a standing ovation. Afterwards, people come up to tell reporters, "If only he were the leader. . ."

From the inevitable question, Crosbie dodges. "We're going to win this election. Trudeau is abysmally underestimating the intelligence of the public."

Suppose, though, the public, intelligent or otherwise, goes with Trudeau. "There'll be no vacancy in the leadership. I fully support, and respect Clark."

For tomorrow

Suppose, suppose, though, a vacancy does occur. At last, Crosbie stops dodging. "If an opportunity did arise, I would certainly give it very serious consideration."

A run for the leadership is for tomorrow. For today, Crosbie is running as hard as he can at his opponents. The Liberals, for their flip-flop on energy prices, "should win the Flopsy, Mopsy and Cottontail award." The New Democrats are "the Moonbeams . . . they want an election every full moon."

It's 11 p.m. A car is speeding Crosbie from Cambridge to a Toronto airport hotel. He switches on the radio and hears the announcer report that a newspaper poll shows the Liberals ahead in 10 sample Ontario ridings. "Trudeau thinks Canadians are too green to burn. He's the one that's going to get burned."

Then he closes his eyes completely. His flight for Saint John, N.B., leaves at 7 a.m. the next morning. The last, best chance knows perfectly well he's a long, long, just about impossibly long, chance.

All the same

The rebooking of Mary E. Mowat's eye surgery was understandably traumatic (Times letter, Jan. 11), especially when there is no guarantee it will not be postponed again. But her motherhood recommendation to upgrade hospitals equates a breath against a wind storm of mass unawareness.

Protest can ease government financial cutback pressure in isolated instances, as the recent Jubilee Hospital case confirms. But the ridiculous situation there prevails, as in other hospitals across country. The indications are that the financial screws that regulate all "wealth and hellfare" departments are to be tightened further during the 1980s.

When the bloom was on the boom, hospital care was far from being humanitarian. The deterioration of the former anti-social standards brought on by the present world recession accentuates the fact that hospitals are another institution under the sway of the 10 per cent of the population that owns and controls the means of life. When one understands that "social" services are state wage subsidies, it is easy to see why they are cut back when the trough in the business cycle requires the maintenance of fewer willing hands and minds to operate the profit making machinery of production and distribution.

It is not the responsibility of the Social Credit government to use provincial profits to provide workers with the best hospital care, no more than it is the responsibility of any other government on earth. Governments are responsible only to the owners of capital, who finance them directly and indirectly.

Consequently, voting for the recycled Liberal and Conservative ideas of the NDP or extreme leftist or rightist parties is a furtherance of passive discontent.

The advocacy of common (not state) ownership and democratic control is the direction of political attack on the cause of social problems. Anyone who wants to enhance his or her perception of the beast may do so by writing the Socialist Party of Canada, Box 4280, V8X 3X8, for material. — J. G. Jenkins, 1090 Lodge Avenue.

Boxing vs tai chi

I am writing in respect of Ald. Gretchen Brewin's comment in the issue of Jan. 18, wherein she objects to the establishment of a Boxing Commission for the City of Victoria.

She is quoted as saying "It's physical violence and I totally abhor this," and that the city council shouldn't give legal sanction to these "head-bashing types of routines."

I would suggest to Ms. Brewin and indeed, to anybody else who abhors physical violence, that they avoid it. Don't take up boxing as a hobby. I think, however, that she should not use her office to impose her own personal sporting preferences or dislikes on those consenting adults who happen to think that they are better qualified to make decisions about their own spare time than is Ms. Brewin.

For my own part, I like combat sports. I enjoy participating and I enjoy watching. I totally abhor the contemporary trend to passivity within sport and more, the pasivity implicit in the whole concept of "spectator sports." Were I in Brewin's position however, I would keep my own personal distastes for tai chi, bowling, basketball and soccer completely divorced from actions in the office to which I had been elected. — David Danylyshyn, 41 Obed Avenue.

Tracing father

While visiting relatives in England over the holidays, I met a lady in her 70s who asked me to try to help her learn, if possible, what happened to her father, now presumed dead.

From sketchy records in her possession, it appears George Murrell, father of Elvina (Vina) Ward of Derby, emigrated to Canada after World War I, settling first in Manitoba and Saskatchewan where he farmed.

A tailor by trade, and, interestingly, a veteran of Ladysmith with the King's Own Rifles, Mr. Burrell apparently moved to Victoria in 1925, joining a firm called Fyvie Brothers, Tailors, Victoria, B.C. Mr. Murrell's wife, mother of Elvina, died at the age of 23 prior to Mr. Murrell's leaving for Canada when work became impossible to obtain in England.

For several years, Mr. Murrell sent money to Mrs. Ward's guardians to pay for her upkeep, and there were letters from Mr. Murrell to his "little Vina." There never was a return address.

Perhaps through your readers we can help Mrs. Ward — "little Vina" — know the end of the story. Does anyone now living in Victoria or on Vancouver Island have any memory of a George Murrell? If so, they may write to Mrs. Ward, c/o Barr, 5 Leopold Street, Derby, England. — Malcolm Barr, Director, Office of Public Information, U.S. Department of Justice, Washington, D.C.

One to keep

Prime Minister Clark is asking for our votes so that he can have the budget passed by Parliament. A budget that the finance minister says will bring about substantial rises in unemployment and inflation. A budget that severely taxes those least able to pay.

More unemployment, more inflation — are these cures for our financial sickness? However, that's what Joe Clark and John Crosbie promise us.

Unfortunately it seems likely that this will be a promise that the Progressive Conservatives will keep if elected on Feb. 18. — Maurice Tozer, 503 Nellie Place.

Native questions

Your readers will be interested to know that we have delivered the following set of questions to the candidates in the federal ridings of Victoria, Esquimalt-Saanich, and Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands. We have asked them to let us have their replies by Jan. 31. We will let you know their responses well before election day.

Project North is an interchurch project with branches across Canada, working with native people for a just settlement of their rights and helping to communicate their struggle to fellow Canadians.

Candidates were asked to indicate whether they agree or disagree with the following statements:

1. The original people of Canada and their descendants have aboriginal rights to land, hunting, fishing, education, the preservation of their culture, etc., which have been recognized in constitutional documents and treaties. The treaties need to be clarified in consultation with those concerned to meet the needs of today and the future. Original people not included in treaties, such as those in British Columbia and the Inuit, should be assured similar rights.

2. The British North America Act and the Royal Proclamation of 1763 guarantees respect for aboriginal rights and will be the basis for proposed constitutional discussions to "patriate" the constitution and devise an amending formula. Representatives of the original peoples should be included as full participants in these constitutional discussions.

3. Lands which have been occupied by the original people of Canada for thousands of years are being developed under license from governments without consultation with the inhabitants. The original people should participate fully in the planning of their future — economic, social and political — according to the basic principle of self-determination as described in the United Nations Charter.

The candidate was then asked to indicate whether, if elected, he would work to ensure that the aboriginal rights of the original peoples are fully recognized and guaranteed for the future, that they participate fully in constitutional discussions, and that they are able to determine their own future. — Alex M. Jardine, Project North, Victoria.

Praise Gandhi

Your cartoon "Who said an elephant never forgets?" (Jan. 15) is rather insulting to Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. Admittedly Mrs. Gandhi is a tough lady — indeed she has to be in order to rule a large country with a population of over 600 million of diverse languages, races and religions with so many conflicting interests, not to speak of outside interference from the two superpowers plus Red China!

The emergency of a few years ago was unfortunte, but very necessary due to subversion from both inside and outside. By taking the admittedly very unpopular measures, Mrs. Gandhi showed guts and saved democracy in her country as well as preventing possibly a great deal of bloodshed. While it is true that there were excesses during the emergency on the part of some over-zealous officials, India was run efficiently, law and order prevailed and even prices dropped. However, after the Janata Party's victory in March, 1977, discipline and efficiency dropped, crime increased, prices rocketed and profiteers had a ball.

INDIRA GANDHI
. . . prevented bloodshed

At the recent general election, the Indian people realized their mistake in voting Mrs. Gandhi out in 1977, and have acknowledged that she is the only person capable of leading the nation and running it efficiently and progressively and with justice for all. It is true she has made mistakes, but what political figure has proven to be infallible?

Western-style democracy, especially with a constitutional monarchy, is the ideal system from the purely human standpoint, but it may not suit every nation under the sun. Each nation must find out which system suits it best and work out its own salvation.

I am delighted that Mrs. Gandhi is back again in her rightful place as Prime Minister of India. I know her personally and correspond with her — and may God bless, protect and prosper her! — Richard D. Corrance, 710 Cormorant Street.

Must resist free spenders: Bennett

Majority government urged

BY STUART UNDERHILL

(Mr. Underhill is a former publisher of the Times.)

Premier Bill Bennett's advice to Canadian voters: Make sure there's a majority government in Ottawa after the Feb. 18 federal election.

Canada can't stand the uncertainty of a minority government that is always wondering whether it may be toppled from office and, therefore, is incapable of taking strong measures to deal with problems like inflation and energy, he said in a breezy exclusive interview with the Victoria Times.

The premier did not specify whether he would prefer a Liberal or a Progressive Conservative government installed in office. He said he has been able to deal effectively with both federal parties. Views expressed during the interview seemed to put him closer to Joe Clark than to Pierre Trudeau.

He did not name the New Democratic Party when discussing the election, but he clearly had them in mind when he deplored the possibility of the country being "held to ransom to third parties who are not responsible, who take no accountability and in fact can be all things to all people."

"If they have power to affect the government we won't have strong government in this country," he said.

At the same time he berated politicians "who promise cheap subsidized gasoline prices to buy votes and talk about more government spending that will run up the deficit." His constant theme was the iniquity of "free-spending" governments which increase rather than try to reduce our national deficit.

Some other points made by Bennett during the 45-minute interview:

☐ A "dynamic" new program for the forestry industry will be introduced at the next session of the B.C. legislature.

☐ A program for making B.C. energy self-sufficient calls for greater use of natural gas and provides for a gas pipeline to Vancouver Island. Bids on the proposal have already been called.

☐ Bennett has no intention of relinquishing the party leadership until he has achieved all the goals he set himself.

The interview took place in Bennett's panelled office in the legislative buildings. He was relaxed and affable but one sensed the underlying tension that comes from complete absorption in his job. He appears very much the organization man, firmly believing that sound planning and hard work are the keys to success.

In talking about the forest industry, Bennett said his government is about to take "a major initiative" to ensure the future of B.C.'s forest resources.

He gave no details but said that "we have to leave a heritage for our children and that means there will be less dollars for the giveaways of today as we allocate more of the provincial profits to ensure that this resource continues."

B.C. also has ambitious plans for developing its energy resources and will work toward the long-term goal of surplus production, he said. A surplus would enable the province to attract business and industry anxious to have a secure supply.

Forty-five per cent of B.C.'s energy consumption is oil and an immediate objective is to reduce that to 40 per cent by 1983, which will require more people to convert to gas.

Bennett repeatedly stressed his concern that there should be a majority government as a result of the election.

"I hope the public will be able to assess what's happened to this country in times of minority government and the undue pressure that third parties can put on, to the detriment of the country," he said.

"People should be prepared to elect a government that can get on with the job. I don't think this country can stand being faced with minorities and the uncertainty that we may have an election such as this one at any time.

"I believe that third parties must suffer at this particular time."

He said that weak governments were mainly to blame for inflation which would continue "until we get governments that have the courage to deal responsibly with government finance and stop trying to buy the voters." They did so through deficit financing and large spending which forced them to compete for money in the private sector.

Bennett said that while he had worked well with the party in power in Ottawa whether it was Liberal or Progressive Conservative, the responsibility of the federal and the provincial governments had to be clarified.

"There are too many areas of overlap which are creating conflicts which were unclear in the British North America Act, where both governments are acting and obviously it is costly to the taxpayer, confusing to the population and not very effective government."

He said he had not had time to study the recent constitutional proposals of Quebec Liberal leader Claude Ryan but "there appear to be strong elements running through them that compare in a large part with many of B.C.'s proposals." B.C. would be very cautious in its analysis "because of the sensitivity of the area."

Bennett said that Canada should set itself the goal of complete energy sufficiency but it would take time to bring other sources on stream. It could not be done with artificially low prices for present supplies.

"If the OPEC nations and the rest of the world cut off the oil supply to Canada today, there would be arbitrary designation of oil and gas supplies by the federal government, and gas rationing," he said.

He said he regarded high interest rates arbitrarily imposed by the federal authorities as another factor in inflation. He did not believe that we had to tie ourselves to the United States rate. Lower interest rates offered by the B.C. government's mortgage interest scheme proved they were acceptable not only to buyers but to builders.

The premier said he was opposed to "big government" which taxed all the initiative away from private enterprise. "We want to encourage people to be capitalists on an individual basis," he said.

His government's policy was to leave more money in the hands of the people and to make it easier for them by continuing moves toward deregulation.

Despite the unsettled international scene and the election uncertainties in Canada, Bennett professed to be "very confident" about B.C.'s prospects in the 1980s.

He said that government projections envisaged further growth in resources as well as the development of processing industries.

Major forestry, energy moves pledged

On how long he'll stay

Q. — When you first took office as premier was your father a big help in the background or did he say "Go to it, son."

A. — In our family we always had a good relationship. When he was in government and was premier, I often gave him advice most of which he never took. He often gave me business advice some of which I took. I wouldn't say that he didn't give me advice, but we always had a relationship of friendly exchange to allow people to bring their own ideas to government. I would say that the experience of growing up with him was the guidance I used. But during his last years he wasn't very well.

Q. — You are on record as saying that two terms are enough for anyone to serve as premier. Does this mean that you won't be leading the party into the next election?

A. — Oh, it doesn't mean that. I think that when I was first elected I was asked a question and I didn't say two terms or how long I planned to stay. I said I thought I would probably be able to achieve what I set out to do at an age that would place me about the age my father would be when he was elected. That would have been 52 years old and that takes me well beyond the next election. (Bill Bennett is now 47 years of age.)

I've only made one firm commitment on my political career and that's to my wife and family and that's private. My commitment was to do certain things and when they're accomplished I hope that other people with lots of enthusiasm and lots of new ideas come along to take it on. It's not a matter of years then, it's a matter of results. I also know that you shouldn't try to stay on forever.

On higher energy prices

Q. — Do you agree with the policy of higher energy prices?

A. — The OPEC nations changed any orderly progression of relating energy values . . . They forced countries such as ours to look at our energy and price our energy in relationship so that we can bring on stream other energy forms from within our economy which would not be developed if we artificially suppressed the price.

This country has got to develop complete energy sufficiency so we are not dependent on any outside source. That is our goal in B.C. In fact, we want an energy surplus to allow us to attract industry and business who can see a secure supply. That's going to be difficult because B.C. imports 75 per cent of its oil. That means plans for diversification into natural gas . . . We're also stretching gasoline whether its additives using forest products for alcohol or the liquefaction of coal. We're fast approaching the economics that allow this to happen. It can't happen when you have artificially low prices. It means that we have to realistically have levels in our country that will make people aware, practise conservation and get on with the job of using other energy sources. We have to stop whistling in the wind that somehow we're all going to be saved.

Q. — Is a natural gas pipeline to Victoria still on the cards?

A. — There was a gas pipeline proposed prior to 1972 and the proposal was stopped with the election of the NDP government. The economics are far different now but the need is greater. What we've done since we became government is change several factors that developed under the previous administration to allow us to consider getting on with it now even at higher cost.

We have substantially increased our gas reserves. Our 30-year base on which we project domestic supplies allows us to consider additional export as well. That additional supply that we've encouraged has been brought on by such things as th Grizzly Valley pipeline. A climate of confidence allows us to have called bids for a pipeline proposals to Vancouver Island. Those bids have been called for.

We're going to cut our dependency on oil as a total energy form. Forty-five per cent of B.C. energy is oil. It's our goal to reduce it to 40 per cent by 1983. One of the ways is to have more people convert to gas and to get gas to large regions of this province that don't have access to it. That means that we have to go to Vancouver Island. It's going to cost money but I'm determined to bring that B.C. resource to all our people as part of our strategy to lessen our dependence on oil . . . I hope that when they review the proposals we'll be able to get on with the job.

On forestry

Q. — Are you satisfied that proper steps are being taken to maintain our forest resources?

A. — There wasn't the concern in the development days of B.C. that there is today over major reforestation . . . This year our government is ready to commit that we will ensure that there is a forest resource there in the future. You can look to this session of the legislature for a major initiative by the government to ensure types of programs and that the forests will be available in other ways to make this happen. That means the government won't have the choices to spend money for a lot of things that people want now today. We have an obligation that's more than just happily spending for today and leaving tomorrow for the future. We have to leave a heritage for our children and that means there will be less dollars for the giveaways of today as we allocate more of the provincial profits that we're generating with an expanding economy to ensuring that this resource continues.

There again it's inconsistent for politicians to call on us to spend more for people and talk about conserving forests when the money that should be going there is going in all the wrong directions. A well-managed economy, well-managed government can give all the assurances of social support but we can't destroy [illegible] makes it possible because then you'd be on a collision course and that's no future even for the existing people who if it falters and falls apart will not even have the programs they now have . . .

We don't just slide into the '80s. We've been building for years in preparation of meeting the economic challenge and this will be a dynamic entry into the '80s as far as forestry is concerned.

STRAY FEATHERS

Harold Hosford

Our Mr. Lister's big project

In a moment of madness, brought on, I think, by something we drank, David Stirling and I found ourselves committed to a Big Day.

A Big Day, to those of you unfamiliar with the jargon of the bird lister, is one where all the time and energy of the lister is concentrated on how many kinds of birds he can see in a 24-hour period. The Big Day is only one of the challenges of the bird lister. As a matter of fact, to the confirmed lister, there seems to be no limit to challenges. There's the Big Day, the Big Week, the Big Month — and so on; there's also the Area List, the Country List, the Continental List and the World List — this last open only to a chosen few — and, of course, there's the Life List. Just about every birder worthy of the name, has a Life List — a list of all the kinds of birds he's seen in his life.

Listing is a sport and, like any other sport, its success as a challenge depends on rules. For the most part, the birders set their own rules but, for those who aim for greater things, the American Birding Association (ABA) — fount of all information for listers — has very strict rules and any lister wanting recognition for his list must play by those rules.

But, to get back to David's and my Big Day we aspired to no such heights as the ABA; all we wanted to do was see how many kinds of birds we could find around Victoria in one day. That should have been challenge enough but we decided to add a little more. And that's where the madness comes in because, in setting our rules, we chose to take on the combined strength of the Victoria Natural History Society and all the other loose birders they found for their Christmas Bird Count last December 16.

It would be a big task. The size of it may have escaped David and me when we first got the idea but that size became terrifyingly obvious the more we thought about it. But daunted only slightly, we forged ahead.

The date was set — January 26 — and the plans were formulated; without a good plan we had no hope of success. First we got the Victoria list. It contained 130 species and thousands of individual birds; fortunately we were only after the kinds of birds, not their numbers.

Anyway, of that 130 kinds, there were several that David and I could write-off as unlikely — foremost among them a Rufus Hummingbird. But there were also a couple that were missed on the Christmas Count that we might be able to get — a Green Heron, for instance.

Tuning our plan more finely, we checked on the tides for the great day. Tides are important for seeing birds along the shore; at high tide they're usually huddled on off-shore skerries and difficult to find while, at low tide, they're active and busy along the receding water line. Tides on the 26th weren't up to much; a low, if you could call it that, was scheduled for 9:30 p.m. with the high some time late in the morning. So, we decided that, if there was a good time to be on the look-out for shorebirds, it would be late in the afternoon.

Checking the solar tables, 8:00 a.m. looked like a good time to start. As for a quitting time, we'd go as long as we could and, if the will was there, even try for Owls after dark.

Our route, keeping to the limitations decreed for Christmas Bird Counts, would start at Esquimalt Lagoon, work through Thetis and Goldstream Parks, then back-track to Portage Inlet. From there it would be the Highlands, Central Saanich and Gordon Head with the waterfront from Oak Bay to Ogden Point the finish line. For the Owls, we'd try the university woods.

Seems like we've got everything in order. Oh yes! There's the weather. On that, we can only appeal to a higher authority. All that's left is to wait for the Big Day. For results, stay tuned. If all goes well, I'll have them for you at this time next week.

Abortions at Jubilee tripled

The tough line taken at Victoria General Hospital has tripled the abortion workload at Royal Jubilee Hospital and the RJH board will ask VGH to assume some of the load.

The Jubilee's board voted Thursday night to make its concerns known and board chairman Eric Simmons will ask to appear at the next meeting of the VGH board to explain the position.

RJH executive director Michael Butcher said the hospital is having difficulty handling all the abortion applications and operations since the VGH's new therapeutic committee began taking a tougher stand.

As of last week VGH's committee had approved only four of 31 applications which it had received in contrast to its past practice in which 99 per cent of applications were approved.

Butcher said the resulting surge of demands for abortions at Jubilee had put an "unacceptable load" on the hospital's staff and facilities.

"In the past they did two abortions for every one we did, which means a tripling of our workload," he said.

VGH might consider its medical obligations to share the load in the area, apart from any moral or philosophical questions, rather than forcing RJH to do all abortions by default, Butcher said.

Dr. Elinor Powell, RJH's chief of medical staff, said the demand also means a considerable workload for members of the hospital's therapeutic abortion committee, which now must review abortion applications for the entire region.

The committee, she said, has had to be increased.

Board vice-chairman Taffy Richards said of the VGH therapeutic committee: "It seems to me that they are abrogating their responsibilities."

Powell took issue with Richards, however, saying the VGH committee has the right to make the decisions it did.

The system in the U.S., where abortion requests involve only the woman and her doctor, and in many cases do not even take place in a hospital, was superior to the Canadian system, said board member Peter Bunn.

ISN'T SHE LOVELY? Joan Priddle of the Vancouver suburb of Surrey shows the style that helped her recognize her brother, Melville Taylor, in newspaper photos. Taylor, billing himself as the ugliest man in Britain, hadn't been seen by his sister in 34 years. They were reunited via telephone.

Clark's contract terminated by RJH board

The Royal Jubilee Hospital has terminated the contract of former acting director John Clark.

Clark, who became acting director following the resignation of Dr. Archibald Pickles, has been told his services are no longer needed.

He had been the leading candidate for the post of project director in charge of implementing administrative changes to rectify problems identified in the Moreton report, a joint hospital-government investigation last spring.

The hospital board Thursday approved a recommendation by executive director Michael Butcher, Clark's replacement, that a project director not be hired.

Butcher said administrative problems are less significant than the extreme shortage of beds and the long surgical waiting list at the hospital.

He said implementing the Moreton report would cost about $1.8 million.

Board chairman Eric Simmons said the board felt many of the recommendations could be carried out by existing hospital staff and that the provincial government would not provide funds for a project director.

Some members of the board were upset that the board's executive committee had not involved the whole board in the decision not to hire a project director but the recommendation was passed without formal opposition.

NDP attack readied for Feb. 29 session

What shapes as one of the stormiest legislative sessions in B.C.'s long history of rambunctious politics opens Feb. 29 — Leap Year day.

"It's about time," snapped NDP leader Dave Barrett when Premier Bill Bennett made the announcement Thursday.

"There's a lot of work to be done."

Despite hints from Barrett that the NDP will soft-pedal the issue, the long-running dirty tricks affair is expected to provide fireworks on the floor of the house and Speaker Harvey Schroeder will have a busy time trying to keep order as the catcalls get nastier and tempers rise.

The main targets for the opposition will be the B.C. economy and a drifting government.

Bennett's leadership will also come under attack.

"It is obvious there are disruptions in the cabinet. It is obvious there are people unhappy with him as leader," Barrett said.

Suggested Barrett: "If there is to be a palace revolt, they should get it over with before they go in there."

Another target will be Human Resources Minister and Deputy Premier Grace McCarthy.

The opposition has several salvoes ready to deliver to that minister, dealing with such diverse subjects as her role in dirty tricks and reported cutbacks in social services.

Bennett gave no hints on what will be in the throne speech which outlines the government's legislative program on opening day.

However a couple of unfulfilled promises from the last throne speech are expected to make a comeback — a universal denticare program and a provincial bill of rights.

The government's reply to opposition criticism of the economy is expected to be yet another balanced budget with a sizeable surplus to boot.

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis will bring in his budget for the 1980-81 fiscal year March 10.

Charlottes battle not over?

Confrontation between timber interests and environmental protection agencies in the Queen Charlottes will continue, a public meeting was warned Thursday at Reynolds Secondary School.

Eugene P. Runtz, forest engineer of Q.C. Timber Ltd., recalled the arrest and jailing of loggers employed by his firm in an armed action by federal fisheries officers at Riley Creek last year.

All charges were later stayed, Runtz said in a lecture sponsored by the Canadian Institute of Forestry and Camosun College continuing education program.

But there remains "an apprehension and uneasiness in the aftermath of that sad and shameful episode."

Runtz called the fisheries action — taken when logging plans at Rennell Sound appeared to threaten fish habitat with erosion — "arbitrariness and heavy-handed . . .

"Unhappily, I anticipate the likelihood of continuing conflicts in the coming year, not necessarily involving only Q.C. Timber, but other companies as well — because any forestry firm would seem to be fair game in the climate existing in British Columbia today."

The speaker said there was loss of production and wages, and "the anger of our people being handled as common criminals, and the fear and anguish caused their wives and children will not soon be forgotten."

He compared the events with emergency action taken by the same government to withdraw Canadians from revolt-torn Iran where he had been posted shortly before.

"Let me say that in all my time in Iran I nver saw a menacing gun in that country's forests. But three months later and 10,000 miles away there were guns in B.C.'s forests and they weren't just those carried by moose hunters."

Runtz said the geological history of the Queen Charlottes makes them subject to earthquake upheaval and landslides as part of their natural evolution, presenting greater challenges to timber operations.

But the latest challenge is a confrontation of one resource against another.

"It is a senseless conflict which presents many sides but with no clearcut winner.

"All stand to lose, including those well-meaning but ill-informed groups and individuals who demand, at the very least, severe curbs on log-cutting in the Charlotte Islands," Runtz said.

"At their very extreme, they would put an end to timber harvesting forever. Can any rational person allow, or afford, either to happen? The answer is a resounding 'no'."

Runtz offered a solution in single management for forest and fish resources within definable low and high value areas, which will require additional funding and research staff for both the companies and the regulatory agencies, and reasonable direction.

Q.C.'s immediate plans call for an over-all resource management philosophy drawing on the company's own resources, consulting organizations, B.C. Forest Service and the provincial fish and wildlife branch.

A good start would be in reducing the impact of roadbuilding and logging on soil, fish and water resources.

Work already done by the firm includes the commissioning, and following, of the most thorough geotechnic study of terrain ever undertaken by a forestry firm in any given area of the province, Runtz claimed.

Q.C., he said, is using extraordinary care at all its logging sites to avoid disturbing creek beds and in the disposal of forest waste. "We can look forward to increasingly productive fish runs over the coming years as the beneficial consequence to prudent and considered road planning with all its attendant aspects."

Sky-line logging and helicopters also are being used to avoid disturbing terrain, and Runtz said the firm is willing to spend to satisfy regulatory agencies, provided the gap in inter-regulatory communications is closed and laws are interpreted consistently.

A modest demonstration of the company's commitment is the fact that three years ago it asked the province to set aside 40 to 50 acres of beach site at the mouth of Gregory Creek for its protection and for a parksite to be developed by the company, Runtz said.

He was hopeful of the future, provided a thoughtful approach is taken to development in the Charlottes.

"There should be no mistaking as to our intentions of staying in business in the Charlottes. We have obligations to our employees, to our customers, and to to our governments at all levels."

Speedometer at 80-90

The speedometer of a jeep that crashed into a lamp standard in Saanich early Jan. 2 killing a 17-year-old girl was stuck halfway between the 80 and 90 km/h marks, a coroner's jury was told Thursday night.

Saanich police sergeant Norman Ellison was testifying at an inquest into the death of Kathleen Ann Cameron of 2224 Edgelow.

The girl was a passenger in the jeep driven by Malcolm Minns, 19, of 3385 Whittier.

Minns and another passenger, Stephen de Girolamo, 21, of 4014 Cedarwood, received multiple injuries in the mishap which occurred about 1:30 a.m. at McKenzie and Oakwinds. Minns has been released but de Girolamo remains in hospital.

Medical evidence at the inquest showed the Cameron girl suffered numerous injuries, including a broken neck, and was dead on arrival at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre adjourned the inquest to May 5 by which time de Girolamo is expected to be well enough to take the witness stand.

Brand name accord set

The Yarn Barn of Vancouver has agreed to stop manufacturing sweaters using the name Cowichan.

The decision was made after protests from the Cowichan Indian band of Duncan, which claimed exclusive historic rights to the name.

The Yarn Barn, which took out a patent on the name Cowichan five years ago, said it was willing to phase out the name of its manufactured sweaters over a three-to-four year period, which would allow it time to sell off existing stocks.

Band spokesman Wes Modeste said this proposal will be submitted to the band council for approval. The band has been considering court action.

The band members knit Cowichan sweaters out of wool using spinning techniches that have been used since the Cowichans first moved into the district.

The band may form a manufacturer's association to head off any future problems in the distribution of its sweaters.

The Cowichans are concerned about the increase in look-alike sweaters made from machine-spun wool.

An order for 340 sweaters in Japan was lost when a commercial company undercut the Cowichan price and produced machine-spun sweaters using patterns similar to the Cowichan sweaters.

The Cowichan knitters have elected an executive, headed by Sarah Modeste of Modeste Carding Ltd, to study the idea of a manufacturers association, which would try to standardize prices, sweater sizes and quality.

The U.S. government reported this morning that the consumer price index rose a seasonally adjusted 1.2 per cent in December, extending its increase for all of 1979 to 13.3 per cent.

That marked the worst inflation rate for the country in 33 years.

Natomas, which announced an oil discovery on Wednesday, climbed 1⅝ to $39.

Craigmont Mines soon defunct

VANCOUVER (CP) — Craigmont Mines Ltd. will fold when its copper mine near Merritt closes in early 1981, company president Ross Duthie told the annual meeting of shareholders Thursday.

"Craigmont has been a successful company and management would like to see it continue, but unless the prospect arises for a new investment with a good expectation of continued earnings and cash flow, no investment will be made," he said.

The company's assets will be distributed among the shareholders, Duthie said.

He said that if the price of copper rises to $2 U.S. a pound — it's currently at $1.10 — the mine could be operated for a few months longer, but the remaining material is very low grade.

Britain blocks distillery bid

LONDON (Reuter) — The British government today temporarily blocked an £80 million (about $212 million) Canadian takeover bid for the scotch whisky firm of Highland Distilleries.

In doing so, the government referred the bid to its monopolies commission.

Highland Distilleries, makers of the brand known as Famous Grouse whisky, had been strongly resisting the bid which came from Canada's Hiram Walker-Gooderham and Worts Co. Ltd., of Windsor, Ont., one of the world's biggest drinks firms.

But London financial circles had not expected a monopoly probe.

Scotch whisky exports to North America account for more than one-third of total scotch whisky exports and play a big role in Britain's balance of payments.

Shares in Highland Distilleries fell after the news by 27 pence (71 cents) to 120 pence ($3.17) a share had met little response.

In the first 11 months of 1979, scotch whisky sales to the U.S. totalled 91 million proof gallons worth £172 million ($454), the scotch whisky association said.

company reports

IT&T

International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. has announced it expects to report sharply lower annual earnings for 1979, due largely to the previously-announced closing of a pulp mill in Quebec.

ITT said it expects to post annual profits of $2.65 (U.S.) a share, down from $4.66 in 1978. It did not estimate total earnings, which were $661.8 million in 1978.

During the third quarter, ITT took a write-off of $320 million in connection with the closing of the mill in Port Cartier, Quebec.

Without the special charge, the company said, earnings a share would have been up about seven per cent for the year.

ITT said worldwide sales and revenues, including insurance and finance revenues, are expected to have reached a record $21.8 billion in 1979, up 13 per cent from 1978's $19.4 billion.

For the first nine months of the year, ITT earned $229.5 million, or $1.60 a share, down from $480.7 million or $3.39 a share in the same period of 1978.

Final earnings for the year will be released in March.

Standard

Standard Broadcasting Corp. Ltd. of Toronto has reported consolidated net earnings for its first quarter ended Nov. 30, 1979, were $2.51 million or 4.44 cents a share, up 19.8 per cent from $2.1 million or 37.1 cents a share in the same period in 1978.

Alcan

Alcan Aluminium Ltd. has reported that its profit for 1979 jumped to $427.5 million (U.S.), or $10.57 a common share, from $297.0 million, or $7.34 a share, in 1978.

The company said the figures included an extraordinary gain of $21.5 million, or 53 cents a share, which resulted from the second-quarter sale of its remaining investment in the Norwegian aluminum producer Ardal og Sunndal Verk.

In the fourth quarter ended Jan. 31, Alcan had net income of $117.5 million (U.S.), or $2.91 a share, compared with $87.6 million, or $2.16 a share, in the previous fourth quarter.

Consolidated sales and operating revenues for the year increased to $4.38 billion from $3.71 billion, and to $1.12 billion from $1.02 billion for the fourth quarter.

CLUES ACROSS

6. CAPITALISM not capitalist. In "sweeping" terms, CAPITALISM as a broad concept is more apt than an individual capitalist.
7. STAMPS not stumps. "With care" suggests a more delicate operation than the removal of stumps (normally with some power or violence).
8. HORSE not house. Certain houses might be considered eyesores.
12. GAIN not gait. This usage of "go far" means to prosper in life, as by GAIN, rather than simply to walk a long way.
15. SAY not saw. Since it is words that you "note down," SAY is more directly apt than saw.
17. PUSH not gush or rush. Characteristically, one gushes effusively, or rushes headlong; it is to PUSH, rather, that is the sort of thing one can tend to do just "a little."
18. COKE not cake. You need "a suitable place" for the fuel, COKE. It's all right to keep cake practically anywhere handy; it's more a question of needing a suitable container.
20. CALL not fall. The belittling tone of the phrase: "has only to," suits CALL better, since a fall may be serious. Also, the phrase in question applies to something done with intent.
23. LONE not long. Since it stands to reason, anyway, that a "feat of endurance" must be long, "LONE" is the more contributive word to put in.

CLUES DOWN:

1. MATTERS not batters. Why batters, specifically, when all baseball MATTERS are of interest to fans?
2. FIRMS not films. The clue is more necessarily true of FIRMS. Films may be amateur, or "successful" in the artistic sense without much commercial profit.
3. LASS not lads. One would associate chivalry with gallantry towards a LASS rather than helpfulness towards lads. Also, it is for a LASS, rather, that the loneliness of the road could tend to heighten predicament.
4. WISH not fish. Merely to sit and WISH (i.e., not to do anything) is certainly contrary to being a go-getter, who may nevertheless like to sit and fish occasionally for relaxation.
5. GIVE not dive. "There are people . . ." (this suggesting certain types, a small minority) who are apt to make a show of their generosity when they GIVE, but there is something characteristically ostentatious about stylish diving. A flourish is a brief gesture; one cannot live with a flourish.
9. KITS not bits. Bits would be for drilling holes, rather than for general "woodworking," like KITS of carpentry tools or assemble-it-yourself KITS.
13. PRINTER not painter. The idea of "quality or work turned out" strikes a practical note; this suits PRINTER better than a painter (artist).
14. TRIPPER not trapper. The clue is more aptly said of one who has absented himself voluntarily, for pleasure (TRIPPER). Why should a trapper not be entirely glad to get back?

Smoke filter useless?

OTTAWA (CP) — The health department says tobacco filters may do little or nothing to reduce carbon monoxide levels in cigarettes.

David Bray, head of tobacco control, said Thursday that smokers using filtered cigarettes may inhale more carbon monoxide than those using non-filtered brands.

Carbon monoxide has been linked with heart and respiratory diseases and poor fetal development.

Users of non-filter or short-filter brands who smoke them to a short butt can inhale up to 30 per cent more tar and nicotine than is labelled on the package.

City man convicted in Toronto trial

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario Supreme Court jury convicted a Victoria man and an American Thursday of second-degree murder in the March, 1978, shooting of a Hudson's Bay Co. employee, ending one of the longest murder trials in Canadian history.

The jury took 23 hours after a 76-day trial to find Tony Genovese, 33, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Glen Flett, 29, of Victoria, guilty of the murder of Ted Van Sluytman during a robbery at the store.

The second-degree murder charge carries a mandatory sentence of life imprisonment.

Dennis Dubinsky, 22, of Chemainus, was earlier sentenced to 15 years for manslaughter in Van Sluytman's death. Dubinsky had identified Genovese and Flett as his accomplices and testified that Genovese planned the robbery and Flett shot the 40-year-old Van Sluytman as he tried to stop one of the robbers from fleeing the store.

Dubinsky testified he struck a messenger from an armored car service on the head with a hammer and took a bag of money which had been picked up for the store's cash office. He gave the bag to Flett and the two men fled the store by different exits.

The jury heard that Genovese was supposed to be waiting outside in a car. But Dubinsky went away by himself to a house he and Genovese rented. The stolen money was divided at a rented house in Toronto and Dubinsky then returned to B.C.

Genovese and Flett were arrested May 16, 1978, after the murder weapon, a .38-calibre revolver, was found in the rented house. Dubinsky was eventually charged with murder. The charge was later reduced to manslaughter after Dubinsky agreed to testify against Genovese and Flett.

Chrysler tries honey

TORONTO (CP) — Financially troubled Chrysler Corp. is introducing an unprecedented program of customer incentives to try to win customers, it was announced today.

A Chrysler Canada spokesman said the program includes a 30-day money-back guarantee, a $50 test drive offer and no charge for scheduled servicing for two years or 40,000 kilometres.

The program, to include light-duty trucks, will apply to all North America.

Parts of the program have been tested recently in sections of the United States.

The money-back guarantee, the first of its kind in the auto industry, was introduced in Salt Lake City Jan. 14. It provides that a customer gets a full refund of taxes, fees and payments applicable to the purchase of the vehicle for 30 days or 1,600 kilometres if he is not satisfied.

The test drive offer, introduced in Kansas City Dec. 4 and later extended to four other U.S. markets, gives $50 to anyone trying a Chrysler product who buys that vehicle or a comparable new competing make within 30 days of the test.

Also included in the package is a two-year membership in an auto club.

In Canada, this will mean the Canadian Automobile Association.

The program does not include police, taxi, leased or rented vehicles, the company spokesman said.

Hit by falling sales, Chrysler has been seeking government financial assistance in both the U.S. and Canada. The U.S. government has offered an aid package, but a decision on help in Canada has been put off because of the Feb. 18 election.

Da: a wonderful Irish brew

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Hugh Leonard's memory play, Da, is a wonderful Irish brew of laughter and tears.

It's a mixture of misguided emotions, wilful foolishness and small unexpected patches of sentiment like bandaids on a hurt, clumsily applied.

The Belfry production which opened Thursday is a worthy one. Directed by Carl Hare, it is sensitive to the play's scale and range, is balanced, well paced and smooth.

Ken MacDonald's design has the actors using many areas effectively and combines realism and illusion much as the play itself does.

One is confronted with the actualities of a poor home's kitchen-parlor-larder even to a steaming kettle on the black iron stove. At the same time one is aware of the near presence of the Irish sea and the cliffs above the cottage, almost believing one smells the salt air.

The only bit of atmosphere that is missing is any evidence of Da's gardening trade until almost the end.

As the play begins, Charlie Now (Lawrence Benedict), seated at the kitchen table, is sorting the "bits and pieces" of his foster parents' lives.

Da's funeral is over and Charlie is anxious to be done with the memories and off home to London. But he is not to escape that easily. The comic-touching scenes and sometimes bitter episodes of his childhood and youth persist and Da's substantial ghost will not be laid.

Even at the very end, as he leaves, locking the door and hurling the key away, Da is with him, prancing arthritically, hand on his shoulder. He is never to lose the memory of Da.

Bernard Behrens, one of Canada's most internationally successful actors, plays Da. The role is a tour de force for an actor and Behrens plays it to the hilt. It's a clear and vivid portrait of an old man — wrong-headed, stubborn, a petty tyrant at home who subsides into obsequiousness in the presence of those he regards as "quality".

Behrens' presents a multi-faceted characterization; wonderfully funny, angry, jealous, cajoling, bitter; yet so warm and human that it is impossible not to respond to him, to care about him.

Everything has a wonderful reality; his face reddens with rage, his bones appear to creak. We can almost hear his thoughts.

But despite the strength of his total performance it is also an ensemble performance and not a virtuoso solo. And nowhere is this made clearer than in a fine moment of contrast and climax when his jealous rage over an old rival brings him within an ace of striking down his wife.

The ensemble playing is due as well, to a generally talented cast able to live up to the challenge of not permitting a beautifully written central part to overwhelm them.

Lawrence Benedict started with a slight sense of not being firmly in the saddle, opening night, but as time went on he settled down to an effective and deeply felt portrait of a memory-haunted man whose conscience has never let him rest; who cares and wants not to care. Make-up could have helped him to a more convincing middle-age.

His wife finds in Florence Paterson, an excellent character actress, a sort of Edith Bunker; not a copy however, but a well understood thoroughly explored person in her own right.

Charlie Then (the young man) is effective and touching as played by Joe Ziegler and Bill Hosie as the friend, Oliver, adds delightful accents. A quite wonderful and clearly incised portrait of the bloodless bureaucrat, Drumm, is provided by Peter Brockington.

Not so convincing is Nancy Palk as the town floosy and Margaret Barton has a small and not too memorable scene as Da's employer.

Again, this is a Belfry production not to be missed. See it before it ends in two weeks' time.

Youth club asks for funds

By BRENDA DALGLISH

The Langford Boys and Girls Club will be able to expand its existing programs in Colwood, Langford and Metchosin if those areas provide financial assistance, says a spokesman for the club.

Dena Blatchford, co-ordinator of the organization, made the comment following a promise by regional directors from the areas to consider the club's eligibility for a grant.

The club had asked the Juan de Fuca Recreation Commission to pay $10,700, half the salary costs for three workers in the communities.

But the commission, at its regular monthly meeting was told by chairman Howard Drummond it doesn't have the authority to donate money for salaries to outside groups.

However, Drummond said, he and the other directors, Metchosin's Mac Tipton and Langford's Ed Lubick, can use grants-in-aid at their discretion.

The grants-in-aid function would raise a total of about $16,000 which could be used for recreation purposes, said Drummond.

"We've never used this before but in this case I believe the club is providing a needed service that we don't provide and should be considered for such a grant," Drummond said.

"I've been involved with Boys and Girls Clubs in the past. They try to take problem teenagers off the streets and provide them with something to do."

Commission member Jill Mallet agreed.

"There's a strong need in the community to supply services to these kids. It's something totally different than a soccer club but its needed," said Mallet.

The club offers a variety of activities to teenagers including a place to "hang-out".

It also has a junior group for younger children.

The teenage section was started last year following complaints by merchants on Goldstream Avenue in Langford that teenagers were gathering in the area and hurting business.

Drummond suggested directors meet club representatives and obtain more information.

The commission also considered a proposal to install a draught beer machine in the recreation centre's lounge.

Currently only bottled beer and hard liquor are available and the commission hopes to increase use of the facility by providing draught beer.

The commission asked for more information on projected costs and revenues before making a decision.

Thomson 'strapped'

TORONTO (CP) — Thomson Newspapers Ltd. may have to borrow more than the projected $90 million to finance the acquisition of FP Publications says Peter Bogart, Thomson's vice-president of finance.

Bogart says FP, publisher of eight daily newspapers including the Victoria Times and the Toronto Globe and Mail, "is strapped for cash" and total borrowing to finance the deal could rise above the original projected figure.

Thomson beat out Montreal financier R. Howard Webster on Jan. 11 for control of FP with a bid of $164.7 million.

When the takeover is finished, one of the decisions Thomson may have to make is whether to exercise an option to buy one third of the Montreal Gazette for $13 million. The option was extended by Southam Inc. of Toronto when FP ceased operation of the Gazette's rival, the Montreal Star, in September.

Hong Kong bans hunting

HONG KONG (Reuter) — Hong Kong has banned all hunting in an effort to preserve what little wild life remains in the colony. The government has announced that none of the 414 game licences in existence will be renewed and that in future the use of firearms will be restricted to the premises of shooting clubs. Hong Kong has a few wild ducks, rabbits, some wild boar and small deer in rural areas.

Camosun parking studied

A solution to the street parking problem southeast of Camosun College will be discussed by Oak Bay municipal representatives and college officials Feb. 4.

Mayor Doug Watts said today it's understandable that students won't use pay parking facilities if there is free street parking available nearby.

The street parking is causing congestion and protests from residents on Lansdowne, Westdowne, Foul Bay, Henderson and Middowne.

Council's traffic committee is imposing a two-hour parking limit in the general area.

The trouble started in September when the college introduced pay parking on its lots.

Watts said if a system of pay parking that avoids direct payment is used, such as including a charge in the annual student fee, the lots would be more acceptable.

However, if more students are persuaded to park on college lots additional space may have to be set aside, he said.

Ald. Neil Swainson said he isn't hopeful the parking restrictions will work because students may be able to shuffle cars between lectures.

'Punished enough,' McCartney freed

TOKYO (AP) — Paul McCartney was freed from jail and deported today after the prosecutor's office decided the ex-Beatle had "been punished enough" for allegedly trying to smuggle marijuana into Japan 10 days ago.

The 37-year-old British rock singer-composer was flying to London via Amsterdam aboard a Japan Air Lines flight, immigration authorities said.

McCartney's wife, Linda, and their four children were with him, after having rushed to Tokyo's Narita International Airport to join him.

"Of course, Linda is delighted," said Haruko Minakami, a spokeswoman for Mrs. McCartney. She "left her hotel in such a hurry she didn't even pack."

McCartney agent Tony Brainsby said in London the family and staff apparently were given little advance notice of his release — "It was totally unexpected at this time."

"This is excellent news about our kid. There will be some celebrations in Liverpool tonight," McCartney's brother Mike McGear told reporters in that English city, hometown of the Beatles.

McCartney was arrested at Narita on Jan. 16 when he arrived with his band Wings for an 11-concert tour. Customs officials said they found 7.7 ounces of marijuana in McCartney's luggage.

Members of McCartney's entourage said he was treated well in jail and was in "good spirits." His wife said the jailers wouldn't let him have his guitar or writing materials and he spent most of his time meditating.

'People's Choice'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Carol Burnett may be gone from weekly television but she's not forgotten.

Voters in the sixth annual People's Choice awards Thursday night named her favorite television actress for the sixth straight year and, along with Alan Alda, favorite all-around entertainers.

Besides sharing the all-around entertainer award, Alda was named favorite male television performer and his M-A-S-H series was picked as the top comedy.

The televised ceremony featured the first appearance by Bert Parks as a host since his controversial dismissal this month as emcee of the Miss America Pageant, a post he held for 25 years.

Win a trip to Disneyland!

In 1980 Disneyland will be 25 years old. And, what a celebration has been planned. All during the year, Disneyland will be the scene of the biggest and best family reunion ever.

Your family could be one of the lucky ones to join in the fun and festivities. The Bay is giving away four grand prizes; one each to four lucky families of four. Each prize includes round-trip CP Air transportation from Vancouver; accommodations at the Inn at the Park, in Anaheim, California, plus Disneyland admission and amusement tickets for three days mid-week.

To enter, simply pick up an entry form and complete contest rules at any participating Bay store. Deposit it in marked barrels. No purchase is necessary. Mail entries are not acceptable.

Prize trips are subject to availability. Approximate total value of each of the four prizes, based on a family of two adults and two children: $999.

The winner of each trip will be the first entry (selected by random draw) who can correctly answer a skill testing question.

This contest is subject to all applicable federal, provincial and municipal laws. Contest closes at store closing time. January 26, 1980. Winners will be notified by registered mail.

TOWN TALK

Well, there he goes, off into retirement, free at last from the media and the people who work in it.

Outgoing Victoria police chief Jack Gregory whose relationship with the Times has over the years been anything but rosy or cosy, declined without thanks a request for an interview this week.

Asked why, the chief said he felt the Times has had a habit of showing the police force in a "bad light."

"I just don't feel I would get a fair write-up," said the chief.

You, said Gregory, have played off one police department against another (when did we do that?) and the poor old Victoria force has always been the "underdog."

"I can never forgive the Times for some of the things you have written," he said.

But when pressed for an example, he said: "I don't have the time to dig back in my file and find one."

Have a happy retirement, chief, we at least don't hold any grudges.

Optimist of the year in the classified column is the soul trying to sell tickets to a hockey game.

He/she is offering a pair at $10 a pop.

The tickets are for a Feb. 16 game between the Vancouver Canucks and the Washington Capitals.

Constant contest winner Ann Hodges has done it again.

By filling out an application at a local grocery store Mrs. Hodges, 9606 Ardmore Drive, has won a trip to the Moscow Olympics.

Her husband, Lowell, was recently informed of his wife's good fortune by constest sponsors Canada Packers.

"She does all the work, but she always puts my name down on the entry," he explained.

Mrs. Hodges enters contests regularly and has previously won appliances and long trips.

Liberto's restaurant at Hillside and Quadra has another optimistic new owner who had to start off by paying roughly $6,000 in back wages owed to employees of a former owner.

Tony and Pina Proietti paid off some of the money owed to about 25 of the ex-employees. They didn't get all that was coming — some received 50 cents, others, 60 or 70 cents on the dollar — but they got something.

About 34 former employees were left short after their pay cheques for the first two weeks in June, 1979, failed to clear the bank.

The employees walked off the job June 29, closing the place down. Then they began the task of trying to get the $11,000 they said was owed them.

They resorted at times to picketing the restaurant after it reopened under new management — Charles Watts and his wife Elaine, who bought the place from Nick Liberto.

Liberto eventually regained ownership of the restaurant after the Watts failed to make a go of it. He sold it to the Proiettis, who opened on Boxing Day.

As your dear old Mom used to say, never mind how she looks, son, can she cook?

If you drop by the newest McDonald's down on Douglas Feb. 9 you may get a chance to find out.

For on hand to say howdy will be the 10 finalists in the Miss Teen Victoria contest.

Winner of the contest will be chosen Feb. 14 at The Empress.

The occasion is officially to allow the media to meet the contestants but if the way to a judge's heart is through his/her stomach, the smart contestants might just bone up on burger preparation and serve up a special.

We'd like to herewith settle forever an argument on how Brannan-Brannen Lake should be spelled.

The correct spelling is Brannen.

That's the word from the provincial maps and survey's branch. The lake is named after John Brannen, the first person to farm the area, three miles northwest of Nanaimo.

Brannan apparently crept into maps in the 1920s, the result of an anonymous draftsman's error. The spelling was published on maps for several years before the mistake was noticed.

But it was picked up by the provincial ministry of health when they named the heroin treatment centre, Brannan Lake.

"I think they should change the name," a spokesman for the mapping division said. "We're certainly not going to change the name of the lake. It was there first."

Here's a tip of the old Town Talk top hat to the staff of the Greater Victoria Public Library.

The section that handles directory inquiries has been deluged with calls from people needing phone numbers in Ontario and Quebec and they've been just tremendous.

The Bell Canada strike in those two provinces is affecting us way out here in God's Country.

Direct dialing information in the 613 area Tuesday netted our sleuth a recorded male voice saying: "This is a recording. I am sorry, but due to labor conditions, we are unable to handle your call. If your call is an emergency, please hang up and dial zero for the operator."

The librarians here get the number you need just as quickly as those eastern operators, you don't have to dial as many numbers (seven instead of 13), and one of the gals who handles the switchboard (is there more than one?) has the sort of cheery voice that makes you glad to be alive.

Sorry, girls. This isn't a cash award.

Maggie Christiansen . . . postcards were made to be collected

The 99-day card caper

By BRENDA DALGLISH

Around the world in 99 days.

That's how fast a postcard took to travel a mail route from London to Victoria, to Germany, to the United States, to Australia and back to London.

Maggie Christiansen, manager of the postcard section of Admiral Stamp and Coin Shop on Fort, said the postcard was part of an experiment to duplicate the old-style chain postcard.

Christiansen, an avid postcard collector, said the idea was proposed by a British couple who are authorities on postcard collecting.

On Sept. 13, 1979, they mailed six postcards to Christiansen in Victoria. She received them in early October and forwarded them all to another dealer in West Germany.

The procedure continued until five of the six (one was lost in the mail) arrived back in London. Then one of the cards was sent to each of the people who had originally forwarded them and whose name was on the card.

"Anyone could do this, of course, but it's the only recent chain postcard I'm aware of and it's really unique," said Christiansen.

This is just one example of the lengths avid deltiologists, or postcard collectors, will go to for the sake of their collections.

"Postcards are the second largest collectible, ever," said Christiansen.

In fact, one of the reasons they are so interesting to collect is that they were made to be collected, she said.

The period from 1898 to 1920 is called the Golden Age of postcards, she said. During that time thousands and thousands of postcards were printed. Ladies, and to some degree gentlemen of the time, treasured their collections and eagerly added to them.

Postcard collectors choose many themes for their collections including mailing distinctions, beauty, card theme (military subjects have always been popular), or the printing process.

Christiansen knows of one person who intended to collect cards with pigs smoking pipes! But the collector was forced to abandon his project after finding only two cards with the theme.

One of the rarest cards, and therfore the most expensive, was produced by painter Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec.

The beauty of those old cards can never be duplicated by modern, mass-producing print processes, said Christiansen. A chromo lithography process was used leaving vibrant, intense colors. Intaglio, a guilding process, embellished many cards.

Because of their proficiency in printing, Germans were renowned for their cards.

Around the turn of the century and earlier, she said, postcards were used like telephones today. The mail service was so efficient that mail was delivered, sometimes twice daily, and certainly within one day of mailing.

Christiansen said collectors from around the world contact her shop looking for cards needed to round out their collections.

Most of the cards in her files, many hundreds in all, have been brought in by people who've discovered old collections that have been gathered by relatives years ago.

"I remember one of the nicest collections we ever got came from a man who brought in a big box full of postcards his mother had collected when she was a girl. He had no idea how lovely they were. When he came in he asked us if we were interested and said if we weren't we could just throw them out."

That was several years ago, before the price of cards increased dramatically but he still received about $1,200 for the collection, she said.

Now postcards range from a few dollars to several hundred dollars for some of the rarer ones.

Plane forced to go back

A Pacific Western Airlines flight bound for Victoria was forced back to Vancouver International Airport Thursday night because of a mechanical difficulty, a company official said.

The official said flight 344, with 58 passengers aboard, returned to Vancouver when the Boeing 737 experienced problems with its hydraulic system.

The jet landed safely. No injuries were reported and the aircraft took off again for Victoria without incident.

Low-cost housing loans sought by universities

University of Victoria and Simon Fraser University will ask the provincial government for a student housing assistance plan similar to Premier Bennett's new low-cost mortgage scheme for single-family homes.

UVic faces a serious student housing crisis this fall unless the provincial government helps out, UVic president Howard Petch said today.

Interest rates are running between 13 and 14 per cent, far too high for students to afford, Petch said.

All new housing costs are paid through student fees. The cost of renting a one-bedroom apartment on campus will increase from $1,843 for an eight-month term to around $2,000 in September.

The university has been pushing the government for five years but it hasn't allocated funds to alleviate the situation, Petch said.

The expanding university now has a 650-student waiting list for campus accommodation.

More than 62 per cent of the students come from outside Greater Victoria and a significant number are older with families.

Petch said he expects the 8,400-student population to increase in September and available accommodation to shrink even more.

But he is hopeful the recently-announced mortgage plan means the government will be more receptive to the university's housing shortage.

Roughly 20 per cent of a university's student population should be able to find accommodation on campus, but both UVic and Simon Fraser University are suffering from the same problem, Petch said.

Simon Fraser president George Pedersen today sent a letter to Premier Bennett asking him to consider a low-cost housing scheme for the university.

"If present housing conditions persist through to the fall, we're anticipating a serious crisis for students," Pedersen said in the letter.

He is asking Bennett to review a government policy denying funds for student residences.

"I believe the province should review its current policy whereby universities must seek capital funds for student residences from sources other than the provincial treasury," Pedersen said.

Adequate housing is just as important as adequate classrooms, he said.

Chinatown care centre gets commission nod

By NORMAN GIDNEY

A $1 million long-term care centre on Herald Street in Chinatown has been approved in principle by the regional hospital planning commission and awaits provincial government authorization.

Described as an integral part of the Chinatown revitalization program under way on lower Fisgard Street, the centre would employ Chinese-speaking staff and serve Chinese food to residents, although it would be open to all.

Bill Pennington, assistant director of the commission, said Thursday the 50-bed facility would cost about $1.2 million, by the present $23,000-per-bed rule of thumb used by the health ministry's licensing and long-term care branch.

Ministry official Jeremy Tate said Thursday the branch has made no recommendation yet and is studying the project.

"It's an interesting proposal," he said. "The thing should develop within the next two weeks."

From the branch, it will go to the adult care community facilities licensing board for consideration at its next meeting Feb. 20, Tate added.

Pennington said the target date for completion of the centre, which would be built on the site of the old Chinese hospital at 555 Herald, is early in 1982.

The city owns the property and has agreed to lease it to the sponsoring Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association (CCBA) for a nominal rent.

David Lai of the University of Victoria, who has just completed a survey on the need for such a facility, said this week there are at least 400 Chinese over 65 in metropolitan Victoria.

With an $1,800 federal grant made through UVic, Lai and several geography students surveyed 277 of the Chinese seniors.

Forty per cent were widows or widowers and 60 per cent supported a Chinatown location for the centre. Fourteen Chinese in other long-term care homes were willing to move immediately if one opened in Chinatown.

They supported a residential centre there because it would be close to the old Chinese associations and clubs where they could meet friends and read Chinese periodicals, he said.

The home would also be near Chinese cafes and restaurants where the elderly could have meals with friends and families. And there are several Chinese grocery stores in the area where they could buy Chinese goods.

Lai said it would be convenient for their children, friends and other relatives who frequently come to Chinatown or downtown Victoria. They could drop in at the home to visit at the same time.

The old hospital, now a temporary Salvation Army men's hostel while its new headquarters is being built, was closed last year because it did not conform to provincial standards for a long-term care home. The dozen patients remaining then moved to James Bay Lodge.

The old hospital was built in 1899 by the CCBA and existed on contributions. For example, all Chinese leaving Victoria for China in the early days had to produce a receipt for a $2 donation before local shipping agents would sell them passage.

But it always had financial problems. By 1930 the association could not pay property taxes and the hospital and property reverted to the city, which leased it back to the association at $30 a month for a convalescent home.

Lai said in his report the term "hospital" has always been a misnomer because it was never adequately equipped or efficiently operated. It was more or less a boarding house for elderly Chinese men and was always overcrowded, he said.

A $25,000 bequest, the life savings of laborer Dong Gong, enabled extensive renovations in 1964. But stringent new regulations forced it out of the government-subsidized personal care program in 1977 and the CCBA decided last year it could no longer carry the financial losses and closed it in June.

Form doesn't make waves — just money

By ROSS NEWHAN
(c) 1980, The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — It was an hour before the first post and he had already spent precious funds on parking, admission and a program.

Now he had his wallet out again. He was standing in front of a vendor, shelling out $1.50 for a Daily Racing Form.

"A buck fifty," he said, shaking his head as he walked away. "A buck fifty for a road map to the poorhouse."

The handicapping of horses is an inexact science at best. The mutuel tickets that litter the floors of the nation's tracks are evidence of the financial folly. Most bettors can find the poorhouse without need of a road map.

Yet, consistently, they seem to need the Form, believing that in its past-performance records they will find clues to the day's winners, believing the road map will suddenly lead them to the penthouse.

"They could raise the price to $5," a $2 bettor said, "and people would still buy it. If you're serious (about handicapping), you have to have it."

The Racing Form is the most expensive daily newspaper in the U.S., grandly billing itself as "America's Turf Authority." It is part trade paper and industry bible — at least, apparently, in the minds of the people who put it out.

The Form's roots span 150 years and it enjoys a virtual monopoly in that it owns the copyright on almost all of the sport's statistics. This monopoly has created an environment of seldom being criticized by the industry it serves and seldom criticizes that industry.

At a time when the naton's print and electronic media are preoccupied with negative and pessimistic news, the Form is a good-news paper that refuses to make waves, believing its primary obligation is in the area of statistics, which comprise 80 percent of its daily content.

Publisher Michael Sandler said simply that the Form is not a publication that digs deeply, that it is not "qualified" to carry on that type journalism since it does not have a large enough staff or people trained in that type of work.

He said that while the Form "is the ex-officio voice of the industry, it's our statistical work that's so enormous and important. Our function is to provide the racing public with complete records, the integrity of which they can rely on."

In that capacity, at least, the Form does its job.

The proliferation of tracks Sandler said, has changed the face of what was once a tight little industry. Now the Form's deadlines, memory banks and distribution department are being tested daily.

The Form's Los Angeles plant alone has within its computers the past performance records of approximately 100,000 horses. Each line in the past-performance chart contains 18 pieces of information, such as date of start, track, track condition, odds, distance, time, weight, post position, jockey, speed rating, position at six different points during the race (with distance ahead of the next horse) and the first three finishers.

It takes the computers only about 11 seconds to prepare a field of 12 horses (some with the Form's maximum of 10 past-performance lines) for print. Prior to computer journalism, the past performances were set by linotype. The lead type was preserved in tin canisters.

"I lived in constant feat of an earthquake," Sandler said, smiling. "It would have taken more than a year to reset all that type."

In a sport where the compilation of statistics is otherwise haphazard and in which there is no one governing body, the Forum owns the performance records of every horse, jockey, owner, trainer and breeder operating in the U.S. Its figures are recognized as official in Canada, Mexico and Puerto Rico. The form syndicates its consensus, and either sells the rights to its charts (a complete breakdown of each day's races) to individual papers or to individual tracks. The tracks then distribute them to the papers as a publicity service.

The daily circulation is approximately 150,000 (400,000 on Kentucky Derby day).

There are those who say that the Form's news coverage is mini at best, that the paper has evaded its responsibilities as "America's Tuf Authority;" that it is unwilling to beef up its editorial staff (and payroll) to produce stories that might antagonize the industry and-or, chase off bettors (i.e., prospective purchasers of the Form).

The Form of Nov. 4, 1978, may best illustrate the approach to negative and controversial stories.

— In a page one editorial (it is seldom that an editorial is seen anywhere in the Form), the paper responded to a Sports Illustrated story which alleged that a fixer named Tonhy Ciulla had been rigging races at several Eastern tracks by bribing jockeys.

The editorial said that if the story was true then the guilty parties should be removed from the sport. If untrue, then "a wide and vigorous counteracting public relations program should be undertaken." A revelation concerning possible rigging could not have come at a worse time the editorial said, because racing was already facing stiff competition from other forms of legal gambling.

Joe Hirsch, the Form's top columnist, whose salary is based on part on the public relations work he does for the paper, said, "The Form has anticipated and broken as many racing-oriented stores as any newspaper anywhere. Our stories, however, are based on fact and not innuendo. The Sports Illustrated story on fixing, for example, has yet to be supported by indictments. If and when those indictments come, we will cover the story fully."

But, perhaps, the bottom line is:

— The Form, Sandler said, has never failed to turn a profit. While the advertising (primarily for blood stock and breeding farms) rarely appears significant (approximately 5 percent daily), Sandler said "it is not inconsequential."

The Daily Racing form is owned by Triangle Publications of Radnor, Pa., one of the nation's largest closely-held companies. Triangle's annual revenues are estimated at several hundred million. The firm's publications include TV Guide and Seventeen.

Sabres feel Bruins breath

By The Canadian Press

Coach Fred Creighton says his Boston Bruins are breathing hard on Buffalo Sabres in the race for first place in the Adams Division of the National Hockey League.

"We haven't caught them yet but we're breathing on them," said Creighton after the Bruins whipped the Sabres 4-3 at Boston Garden on Thursday on Terry O'Reilly's goal with three seconds left.

"This is a team that likes to finish first, no matter what it means. They've got a lot of pride. They've been in races with Buffalo before. It's a matter of, 'Are you a better team or is Buffalo?' This should give us a big lift. I don't know what the biggest spread between us and Buffalo was. Around 10 points, I guess, and they were going like hell."

The victory moved the second-place Bruins to within two points of the division-leading Sabres.

In other games, Montreal Canadiens blitzed Hartford Whalers 7-2, Colorado Rockies dumped Pittsburgh Penguins 4-1 and Los Angeles Kings edged Toronto Maple Leafs 5-4.

Steve Shutt had his most productive night of the season, scoring four goals to raise his output to 29 to spark the revitalized Canadiens.

Pierre Larouche scored his 32nd and 33rd for Montreal.

Lanny McDonald, who scored his 25th goal of the season, credited the Rockies' positive attitude for the Colorado victory.

"I think the whole attitude around here is the key," McDonald said after the game. "Even when we weren't winning, everybody was working."

The victory pulled the Rockies to within five points of the last playoff spot and McDonald, who has 10 goals in 13 games since joining the Rockies in a trade with Toronto, said the Rockies still have a chance at the playoffs. "It's a matter of gaining a little confidence. If we can put three or four games together, we can be right back in it with 30 games to go."

Mike Murphy scored twice and Andre St. Laurent, Dean Hopkins and Marcel Dionne — with his 38th — had one each as Los Angeles pleased a home-town crowd by breaking a four-game losing streak.

The loss might have been costly, however. Dionne's linemate, Dave Taylor, suffered ligament damage to his right knee in the first period and did not return to the ice.

Torchy Peden battling cancer

Torchy Peden, known as the king of the six-day bicycle races in the 1930s and a member of Canada's Sports Hall of Fame, is battling cancer at his suburban Chicago home.

His condition is regarded as serious.

Peden, 74, a native of Victoria, was an amateur star in the 1920s and was a member of the 1928 Canadian Olympic bicycle-racing team that reached the semi-finals of the Games before he turned professional in 1930. From his first professional victory in 1931 until his last race in Chicago in 1948 he took part in 148 races and won 38 — a record that stood until 1965.

Meanwhile, in the only league game Thursday, left winger Dave McDonald scored three goals and assisted on two others to lead Brandon Wheat Kings to an 8-5 victory over visiting New Westminster Bruins.

The win was the sixth in a row for the Wheat Kings.

Wide World of Sports on 4 at 4:30, highlights the U.S. figure skating, the 1979 world weightlifting championships from Greece, and international ski jumping championships from Innsbruck, Austria.

National Hockey League game of the night will show Toronto Maple Leafs playing the Oilers in Edmonton at 5 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

And in NBA basketball, the Houston Rockets-Seattle Supersonics game will be shown on Channel 7 at 6 p.m.

Team finalists selected

Two Canadian championship squads and a Pan-American Games gold medalist will vie for 1979 team-of-the-year honors.

Mann Cup lacrosse champion Victoria Shamrocks, Canadian club soccer champion Victoria West and Pan-Am softball winner Victoria Budgets are finalists in voting and the winner will be announced at the 13th annual Greater Victoria Sports Celebrity Dinner at the Empress Hotel, March 17.

Shamrocks, coached by Bill Munroe, captured the Western Lacrosse Association title for the second straight year in 1979 and then went on to bring Victoria its first Mann Cup national crown since 1957 by trouncing Peterborough Red Oaks 4-0 in a best-of-seven series at Memorial Arena.

Vic West, coached by Bob English, won the Island and British Columbia titles and then collected the Canadian crown by winning a four-team tournament against Newfoundland, Quebec and Manitoba at Royal Athletic Park.

Budgets, under coach Harvey Stevenson, were impressive in league and exhibition play against some of the top Canadian and United States teams before going on to upset the U.S. 1-0 in a 17-inning final for the Pan-Am crown.

Later, Budgets won a 10th straight provincial title and made it to the final of the Canadian championship for the seventh straight year before bowing to Ontario.

Stevenson is one of three finalists for Canadian coach-of-the-year laurels and left today for the Air Canada awards banquet in Ottawa. The presentation ceremonies will be telecast at 5 p.m. Saturday on CTV's Wide World of Sports.

Finalists for male and female athlete of the year awards will be announced shortly.

Fishing returns good in many Island areas

Salmon fishing is still fairly good in a number of spots around Vancouver Island.

Finlayson Arm waters are yielding some limits of chinooks to 16 pounds with numerous fish in the eight-to-12 pound range showing up at relatively shallow depths.

Drift fishermen using either Buzz-Bombs or Stingsildas are sharing the catch with trollers using strip, Squirts and plugs.

A few limits of chinooks to 6½ pounds are turning up around the Deep Hole and along the Bamberton shore and a few to eight pounds have been landed along The Wall. Use strip, Tomic plugs or hootchies at depths of around 30 to 35 feet.

Deep Cove has been on the quiet side lately but action has picked up in the Sidney area with chinooks to 20 pounds showing off Coal Island. The most successful tactic has been to troll close to the bottom with green and white, green and gold or fluorescent white hootchies.

A few chinooks have also turned up off Point Fairfax.

Fishing success has tapered off at Oak Bay although a few chinooks to 16 pounds have been landed on strip off Trial Island.

Waters between Race Pass and Church Island have been producing limit catches of chinooks in the 10 to 15-pound range for Pedder Bay fishermen trolling anchovies, strip and luminous white, luminous green, red or green and blue hootchies down to 60 feet in depth.

Becher Bay is yielding limits of chinooks to 10 pounds on anchovies, Tyee strip and red hootchies near Church. Late afternoon has been the best time and a lot of the return has been taken at the 90-foot depth.

Sooke fishermen are still enjoying some fairly good luck with chinooks to 15 pounds showing off The Bluffs and Secretary Island. Use green and white hootchies or Squirts and 80 to 100 feet of line and two pounds of weight.

Further up-Island, a few small chinooks have turned up in Sansum Narrows.

Others to four pounds are showing near Five Fingers and in Northumberland Channel for fishermen getting out at the crack of dawn and trolling strip or green and white and blue and white hootchies at depths between 150 and 180 feet.

The Rainy Bay vicinity of Alberni Inlet is producing chinooks to 15 pounds on deeply-trolled strip.

Courtenay fishermen are pulling in a few chinooks to 12 pounds right in Comox Bay. Buzz-Bombs, Stingsildas and jigged live herring all produce.

Spotty returns of chinooks to 18 pounds were reported following the bait in scattered locations around Campbell River.

Steelheaders are still managing to connect with these fiesty sea-run rainbows in a number of Vancouver Island streams. Best success was reported from the Sproat, Somass, Toquart, Campbell, Quinsam and Gold rivers.

NIBBLES: Eric Grubert is leading the Winter Salmon Festival derby at Pedder Bay with a 22½-pounder . . . The contest, which has been extended to Feb. 10, features a fishing trip to Hakai Pass as the major hidden-weight draw prize . . . Entry tickets are free with the purchase of launching, merchandise, tackle or bait.

Harness driver dies in automobile accident

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Peter Haughton, noted harness racing driver and son of well-known horseman Billy Haughton, was killed in an automobile accident early today, police said. Haughton, 25, drove in three races at the Meadowlands harness track Thursday. He was one of the leading money winners in the sport during the last three years and had won the $100,000 Roosevelt International, one of the sport's most famous races, in each of the last two years.

For his career, Haughton, who started driving at the age of 18, won 571 races.

Law, Plant tops

Excellent single games helped both Arli Law and Jack Plant capture the five-pin awards during the 14th week of the 17th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest.

Arli sandwiched a 322 game between a starting effort of 232 and a 294 finish for a 848 series in the Tuesday Breakfast League while Jack finished off with a 363 flourish after starting out with games of 301 and 201 for a 865 series in the Wednesday Majors League.

Both series, which also qualify the bowlers for the season-end Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs, were rolled at Town and Country Lanes.

Esks have profit for second year

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos have declared a net profit of $187,000 for the 1979 Canadian Football League season, the second straight year the team has come up with record earnings as well as winning the Grey Cup.

The 1978 season broke a seven-year string of net losses and erased the deficit built up over the period.

Gate receipts were $3.5 million in 1979, an increase of $800,000 over the previous year.

Interest building in Cup trials

This summer's sailoffs off Newport, R.I. to decide the defender in the 24th America's Cup should be exciting and full of action.

Three of the United States' top skippers will be in the spotlight, one of them being Ted Turner, the 41-year-old owner of the Atlanta Braves who won last year's historic Fastnet Race. He will return with Courageous in a bid to defend the cup for the second time.

Then there is Dennis Connor, a 37-year-old drapery manufacturer, who will skipper either Enterprise or the new 12-meter Freedom. He's no mean contender. He's won the Southern Ocean Racing Conference three times and is an Olympic medallist.

At 24, Russell Long will be the youngest helmsman ever to enter the trials. The New York ship broker, however, is a seasoned sailor, having raced aboard his father's successful boat Ondine since he was seven years old. His new 12-meter should be ready in April.

It will be interesting to see how he fares because the average age of his crew also is 24 and his judgement in selecting a crew was based heavily on their ability to get along with each other.

He will be up against the great experience and expertise of Turner and Connor, who is a fine organizer with enough money to race two boats in California all winter.

Swimmers who use Greater Victoria recreation facilities will soon be able to get some safe boating procedures under their belts, thanks to a Red Cross safety instructors' course that has been organized by Jim Murray of Centennial Pool.

Twelve instructors are taking the course, which includes canoeing, rowing and power boating. It is the third of its kind to be given since 1974.

Sessions on both Elk Lake and Prospect Lake are part of the course, designed to help spread information on how to use small boats with the maximum of safety and enjoyment.

Speaking of safety, on Monday members of the Victoria Power Squadron will hear how the Vessel Traffic Management Control Centre in West Vancouver manages the movement of vessels from Cape Flattery to Victoria, on to Vancouver and around our main water access routes.

They will meet in the Maritime Museum at 7:30 p.m. to hear Jack Cottingham, officer-in-charge, explain the intricate system. Having visited the centre and met Jack, I know this will be an evening to remember, especially with the likelihood of huge oil tankers plying the Strait of Juan de Fuca in years to come.

Winds were northwest at 15 knots Sunday at the start of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club's long-distance race but dropped to five before the 17½-miler was over.

Overall winner in the division for International Offshore Rule boats was Steve Merriman's Country Style. John Ciceri's Windward, Jan Huibers' Teka, Jack Miller's Scrimshander, Jim Morris' Madelaine and Ken Brown's Razzmatazz rounded out the top five.

Gerry Porter's Lickety Split was the winner in the Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet division, followed by Denny Robinson's Coco II, Rod McBride's LeMolo and Knotsure, owned by Frank Piddington and Sid Bryant.

Ed Life's Semiramis was first across the finish line in an eight-mile race for Cal 20s. She was followed by George Lewis' Tansy II, Blair Humphrey's Ookpik, Ken Wilson's Manitou and Eric Tomlinson's Tarkwa.

There will be two around-the-buoys races for keel boats this Sunday. Start times are 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. The club's dinghy sailors will have series racing again on Saturday. Things get under way at 1:30 p.m.

The Victoria Canoe Club had a good turnout Sunday when 10 canoes and seven kayaks explored the Gorge.

This Sunday there will be an excursion for experienced white water paddlers on the upper reaches of the Cowichan River. Doug Collis is arranging this sortie and can be reached at 591-2309.

Information on paddling trips can always be had by phoning Derek Bamforth at 382-1243 or reading the notice board at the Pacific Canoe Base.

The Canoe Bay Sailing Club starts a new session of racing on Saturday with a six-miler which starts at 1 p.m. off the government wharf at Sidney.

Gordie Inglis, who, along with Peter White, started the club years ago, had an extra little adventure of his own this week. He and Pat Sullivan set out Tuesday to do some diving for abalone at Imrie Island.

When it came time to leave, the cord came out of the motor of their 12-foot aluminum boat and they were forced to spend most of the night on the island.

They built a fire and waited until Pat's wife phoned the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre and an inflatable craft was despatched to pick them up abut 5:30 a.m. the next day.

Knowing Gordie and his cheerful ability to deal with any kind of emergency, it's safe to bet he'll be back on the start-line, good as new, with his all-girl crew when the race starts on Saturday.

Calfee on right track

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — This is a year of decision for Bill Calfee.

Based on his performance, he'll decide whether to give up the pro golf tour and pursue another line of work.

"I'm just not going to stay out here as a Monday qualifier," Calfee, 30, said Thursday. "You can't play out here indefinitely, winning $15,000 or $20,000 less than expenses. Becoming an exempt player is my goal right now."

Calfee, who has experienced little but frustration in three previous years on the tour, took a step in the right direction Thursday with a no-bogey, seven-under-par 65 that gave him a one-stroke lead after the first round of the $250,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open.

Dan Halldorson of Shilo, Man., shot a 36-33 — 69 to wind up four strokes back.

Dave Barr of Kelowna carded a 72 and George Knudson of Toronto a 75.

"Last year was a very disappointing season for me," said Calfee, who won only $15,402. "The first two years I considered learning experience. But last year was very disappointing."

A single shot back at 66 were D. A. Weibring and Bobby Walzel.

A group at 67 included Bobby Wadkins, who scored an eagle-three on the 18th hole, Joe Inman, Terry Mauney and Keith Fergus.

Roughnecks win

VANCOUVER (CP) — Veteran Alan Woodward snapped a 1-1 tie in the third quarter Thursday to give Tulsa Roughnecks a 2-1 victory over Los Angeles Aztecs in the first North American Soccer League indoor game played here.

Woodward, a former member of Sheffield United of the English First Division, showed some of the best ball-handling skills of the night in scoring the winner before 4,343 fans. Don Huber gave Tulsa a 1-0 lead before Gary Etherington tied it for Los Angeles shortly before half time. Los Angeles, which had Vancouver Whitecaps' Bob Bolitho and Bob Lenarduzzi in the lineup, outshot Tulsa 25-12.

Champagne flowing only on Broadbent's jet

By KITTY McKINSEY

ELECTION 80

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative party workers are eating sandwiches instead of steak for lunch and Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau is making fewer plane trips to save money.

But the champagne is still flowing on New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent's campaign jet.

While the Liberals and Conservatives are scrimping to cope with a second general election in less than a year, the New Democrats say they've raised more money than they planned to spend in the Feb. 18 campaign.

Sending a party leader and his entourage across the country for eight weeks, backed by nationwide radio and television advertising, is an expensive proposition.

The three major parties combined spent almost $10 million on their national campaigns for the May 22 election while individual candidates added a further $18 million.

The Election Expenses Act limits the amount the national parties can spend to 30 cents per voter, or about $4.5 million. All kept well within that limit last time.

The biggest spenders were the Liberals at $3.9 million, followed by the Conservatives at $3.84 million and the NDP at $2.19 million. They all plan to spend about the same this time.

However, broadcast advertising rates have gone up 25 per cent because of larger winter audiences and increased fuel costs have pushed up the price of chartering the leaders' DC-9s. So the same amount of money must go farther.

"We're trying to keep tighter control (on expenditures) this time," says Jodi White, Conservative party communications director.

"Of course, we always try to keep tight control, but this time we've got a guy watching day by day, minute by minute, as the money is being spent."

The party is printing no brochures and fewer posters for candidates and has slashed the expense accounts of advance men and workers travelling with Prime Minister Clark.

The Liberal party is saving money by renting Trudeau's plane by the day rather than chartering it for the entire campaign and by selecting television advertising time more judiciously, says national campaign director Gordon Ashworth.

Only the New Democratic Party reports a slightly increased budget, mostly for extra television advertising.

Trudeau's plane is rented from Air Canada for $6,800 a day — up from $6,000 nine months ago — and Liberal planners have kept to a minimum the number of days of flying each week.

The other two parties chartered planes for the entire campaign at a cost of approximately $285,000 and there are fewer reporters travelling with each leader to help defray the cost.

A seat for a reporter on Clark's campaign plane for seven weeks costs $4,300, an increase of $600 from last year's price.

"We basically took a hosing last time," says White.

"We are charging literally what it costs" this time.

Both the Liberals and the NDP are charging journalists more than $4,000. That includes airfare for criss-crossing the country.

Death penalty issue boosted

Police throughout B.C. will ask federal election candidates to say where they stand on capital punishment, the president of the B.C. Policemen's Association said today.

Phil Jamieson, of the Saanich force, said in an interview the association has opted for local input rather than a provincial advertising campaign.

The National Police Association will launch such a campaign next week in an effort to make capital punishment an issue in the Feb. 18 election campaign.

The 45,000-member association took a strong stand in the federal election last May and received Prime Minister Joe Clark's assurance that he would allow introduction of a private member's bill to reinstate capital punishment and a free vote on the issue.

However, with the early defeat of the government no bill was introduced.

Joe Ross, executive director of the Nova Scotia Police Association, said Wednesday the mood of the Canadian people is for reinstatement of the death penalty.

Polls in some areas have up to 80 per cent of the population favoring it as a deterrent to murder, he said.

Parliament abolished capital punishment in 1976 by a six vote majority.

Ross said MPs should put their personal feelings aside when the issue again comes to a vote and consider the wishes of their constituents.

Tories still ahead in West but likely to lose 7 seats

By WALTER STEWART
FP News Service

REGINA — In May, 1979, the Conservatives won 57 of the 77 ridings west of the Ontario border, the Liberals three and the NDP 17. The Tory sweep was more dramatic in ridings than ballots; the party gained more than 50 per cent of the vote only in Alberta, where 66 per cent of all the X's were marked for Conservatives.

Just the same, it was an impressive victory, and political scientists could be forgiven if they wanted to have a Liberal stuffed and mounted in Calgary's Glenbow Museum so that future generations would know what the species looked like.

In this election, a somewhat different pattern is emerging. The Conservatives are still ahead — unbeatably in Alberta and comfortably elsewhere — but they are likely to lose as many as seven seats before the din dies on Feb. 18.

The table shows the results by province last time:

The West — 1979 Results

	PC	Lib.	NDP
Man.	7	2	5
Sask.	10	0	4
B.C.	19	1	8
Total:	57	3	17

The total vote in the four provinces was 3,054,409, of which the Tories received 1,513,923, the Liberals 690,628 and the NDP 808,711 (the rest went to others). In short, the Conservatives got three-quarters of the seats with roughly half the vote, the NDP one out of every five seats with one out of every four ballots and the Liberals, although they received nearly one quarter of the electorate's support, got only 1-25th of the seats.

The results said more about the electoral system than about voter intentions, and left a lot of Liberals snarling, "We wuz robbed."

Conservatives can take some comfort in the fact that, with any luck, the robbery will take place again this time. However, it will not be larceny on quite so grand a scale.

That is because, as all the polls, and two weeks of on-the-ground investigation by FP News Service indicates, the Trudeau Factor has abated this time around.

In May, the then prime minister was seen as a major threat to western civilization, a man who chewed nails, wore barbed wire next to his skin, and danced on the faces of farmers. This time, he is either seen as a "zero factor" or as no worse than Prime Minister Joe Clark.

It follows that, across the West, some of the ballots that were X'd in anger will switch; some votes will come back to the Liberals, some to the NDP, and some voters will stay home.

Consider two examples. The closest the Liberals came in any Alberta riding was in Calgary Centre, where they ran second with 10,591 votes to the Tories' 22,244. To win the seat, the Liberals would have to increase their vote by more than 100 per cent. Can't be done. But in Assiniboia, in southern Saskatchewan, where the results were: PC, 12,365, Liberal, 9,955 and NDP 11,183, a switch of 600 Tory votes to the NDP and another 600 to the Liberals would give the seat to the NDP.

In British Columbia, a five per cent switch away from the Conservatives would give the Liberals three new seats and the NDP one. That, too, is possible.

In attempting to assess what will happen in western Canada, party strategists are guided not so much by national polls as by local public opinion samplings, and what their own workers are telling them, information they then transfer onto the uneven terrain of each constituency.

Outsiders trying to penetrate the murk have to learn a new language. When Ron Huntingdon, Conservative MP for Capilano, and minister of state for Small Business, says, "We're going very well", he doesn't mean his vote is up; he means that he was so far ahead last time — 15,000 votes — that even though support is slipping, a mountain would have to fall on him to keep him out of Ottawa after Feb. 18.

When Reg Parker, the NDP candidate in Saskatoon West, says, "The Tories are in trouble", he doesn't mean that he expects to beat Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn; he means that if a bus runs over Hnatyshyn, the riding is his.

FP News Service has been through the process of translating the poll results and political newspeak onto the electoral map. With the usual caution that there is still some time to go before voting day, the picture that emerges looks like this:

The West — 1980 Expectation

	PC	Lib.	NDP
Man.	6	2	6
B.C.	15	4	9
Totals:	50	7	20

A western landslide for the Conservatives last May looks more like an earth tremor this year.

'Broken faith' blunder another Trudeau gaffe

HALIFAX (CP) — Pierre Trudeau says Prime Minister Clark "broke faith" with Cape Breton by not delivering on a Progressive Conservative promise during the May 22 election campaign of $50 million for improvement of the Sydney Steel Corp.

But Trudeau's charge was later contradicted by Liberal MP Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys) who told reporters the Clark government paid only $7 million because that was all that was requested by Nova Scotia's Conservative government.

It was all part of a confusing day for Trudeau who appeared at a rally here and in the nearby riding of Cape Breton-East Richmond, held by the New Democratic Party, before flying to Halifax where he campaigns today for the Feb. 18 election.

In Victoriaville, Oue., meanwhile, Prime Minister Clark was getting a public endorsement from Union Nationale Leader Rodrique Biron in his bid to increase Progressive Conservative strength in Quebec in the Feb. 18 election.

Clark said his government is seeking strong representation from Quebec and predicted Biron's support would be translated into votes next month.

The prime minister needs all the help he can get in the province. The most recent Gallup poll, taken during the first week of January, shows his party trailing the Liberals by 21 percentage points nationally and losing ground in Quebec, where it elected only two of 75 MPs.

Finally, in Timmins, Ont., New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent got a raucous foot-stomping welcome when he came to this mining town and translated long-time party policies into promises that would mean more jobs for Northern Ontario.

Laying out another part of the "made-in-Canada" jobs policy that is part of his Feb. 18 election platform, Broadbent said mining companies like Inco Ltd. and Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd. should build refineries in Northern Ontario instead of processing ore in other countries.

The NDP tell us the old-line parties are the same. Yet in 1973 and 1974 they supported the minority Liberals nineteen times but in 1979 never supported us once.

Contract Bridge ♠♥♦♣ B. Jay Becker

You are the dealer and bid One Diamond. Partner responds One Heart. What would you bid now with each of the following five hands?

1.♠KQ6 ♡QJ74 ◇AK93 ♣A2
2.♠5 ♡K863 ◇AQ94 ♣AQ54
3.♠AQ98 ♡Q65 ◇AKQ82 ♣10
4.♠KQ74 ♡A2 ◇KQJ972 ♣8
5.♠AQ8 ♡97 ◇AK85 ♣AQJ6

1. Four hearts. You can't very well settle for less than game. It's hard to imagine losing four tricks after partner responds one heart. The leap to game is not a closing bid; on the contrary, it suggests about 20 points because your partner's heart bid might have been based on only 6 points.

It would be dangerous to bid only three hearts, because partner, holding minimum values, might pass. The jump to four hearts is much more accurate for both game and slam purposes.

2. Three hearts. Although the high-card point count here comes to only 15, the good trump support and the singleton spade raise the value of your hand to about 18 points. It is clear that a raise to two hearts would be an understatement of your values.

Partner may pass three hearts, but if he does you should feel that ten tricks are unlikely and that even nine tricks are not certain. It should be borne in mind that partner would have to have a woefully weak hand if he passed.

3. Two spades. The outlook for game is excellent and the risk of a pass of a one spade rebid should not be run. The jump-shift is forcing. There are prospects of a game or slam in spades, hearts, diamonds, or even notrump. Partner's rebid will probably clarify the issue.

4. One spade. Here you obviously have more than a minimum and might therefore feel tempted to indicate your excess values by bidding three diamonds. However, this is undesirable because you might miss a 4-4 spade fit. It is better, all factors considered, to show the spades now, intending to take strong action later.

5. Three notrump. It is reasonable to assume that partner has at least 6 points and that a game, at least, must be reached. Three notrump indicates 20 points, as well as notrump distribution, and therefore inferentially suggests the possibility of a slam. Two notrump would not quite do your hand justice and would risk a pass by partner.

As usual, the number of notrumps you bid — whether in opening, responding or rebidding — draws a fairly accurate picture of your overall values. Notrump is the one area where high-card point count and distribution can usually best be represented with one simple stroke.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Obtain valid appraisal; don't guess or speculate about value of property, other possessions. Check various sources, satisfy curiosity. Gemini, Sagittarius natives figure in scenario. Restrictions are removed, you have greater opportunity to expand horizons.

IF JANUARY 26 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are intense, creative, stubborn, passionate and capable of handling responsibility. Capricorn, Cancer persons play important roles in your life. August could be your most memorable month of 1980, a year in which you will be rid of burden. You are due for added recognition, a greater "audience" and a chance to let go of "security blanket." You are able to take advantage of surprise element. Members of opposite sex find you attractive—you are controversial, dedicated and you could eventually amass a fortune.

FUN WITH FIGURES

Today we have a Magic Square. That's a sequence of consecutive positive numbers arranged in solid square formation so that each column, each row and each diagonal adds up to the same magic total.

That magic total happens to be the square of the smallest number in our sequence, and the sequence is the smallest that will work that way. What must it be?

Before the judge

Judge Fred Green imposed a 30-day jail sentence Thursday in provincial court on a 20-year-old logger who changed his plea to guilty on a charge of assaulting a peace officer.

Trevor Churcher, 3542 Wishart, was sentenced after Green said he had growing concern over the frequency of such offences.

Crown counsel Richard Law told the court Colwood RCMP were called to break up a noisy beach party at Witty's Lagoon shortly after midnight June 28. There were 45 to 50 persons there who hurled verbal abuse, threats, and beer bottles after they were asked to leave.

Law said reinforcements were called and that Churcher pushed an officer three times. He was warned to stop. When police arrested one of Churcher's friends and were taking him to a police vehicle, Churcher tackled one of the officers.

The policeman suffered a knee injury which required crutches and time off work, Law stated. In addition, the man arrested got away for a short time. Churcher himself was not arrested until July 22, when police interviewed him, Law said.

Defence lawyer Gary Salloum said Churcher had been drinking heavily at the beach party and got carried away. He also said Churcher thought the five officers arresting his friend used excessive force.

Judge William Ostler sentenced 27-year-old David Allan Rendell, 1856 Yates, to three months in jail for two counts of possession of stolen property.

Rendell pleaded guilty Jan. 3 and had been remanded until Thursday for a presentence report.

Crown counsel N.K. Varma said the incident began July 20 when Saanich police noticed a vehicle heading west on McKenzie near Saanich Road with only a rear licence plate.

The police vehilce turned around and pursued the car, finding it empty on Grayth[illegible] Place. During their investigation at the scene, Rendell came up and identified himself as the owner of the car but could not produce registration papers. He told officers he had only purchased it four weeks earlier and had left the registration slip at home.

A later check by police indicated the car had been stolen with $700 worth of golf clubs in it.

Rendell was located and arrested seven days later.

He had a criminal record dating back to Feb. 17, 1976, when he was convicted in Prince George of theft over $200 and fined $200.

He also had convictions for possession of stolen property, theft, and breaking and entering in Ganges, Alberta, and Victoria. His last conviction was May 12, 1978, in Victoria when he received 15 months for theft, breaking and entering, and possession of stolen property.

Ostler also placed Rendell on two years probation.

Bail was set at $1,000 surety or cash deposit for a 37-year-old man charged with two drug offences.

Robert Fred Burgan, 1009 Southgate, was charged with possession of hashish and marijuana, both for the purpose of trafficking. He was arrested following a police search Wednesday of a James Bay home.

Green ordered Burgan's release on $2,500 recognizance but added the surety or cash bail condition. Burgan was remanded until Feb. 5 for election of his trial method.

Two men who drove while their licences were suspended received short jail terms.

Joseph Kedmenec, 47, of 2526 Scott, was given eight days.

Law said Kedmenec was in an accident shortly before 9 a.m. Nov. 30 at Cedar Hill Road and Kiwanis Way but fled the scene. He turned himself in at the Victoria police station about one hour later.

Kedmenec had been suspended Aug. 13, 1979, for impaired driving.

Gordon Roger Rumsey, 23, of 1533 Dowler Place, received a seven-day sentence, to be served consecutively to a 10-day term for having care and control of a vehcle while having a blood-alcohol reading over .08 per cent.

Court was told Colwood RCMP went to an accident shortly before 12:30 a.m. Jan. 20 and saw an overturned vehicle on Spencer. They spotted one man throwing beer bottles away before returning to the truck and kicking it. After escorting that person to the police vehicle, a further check was made and Rumsey was found near the truck. It had apparently been heading south when the driver lost control.

It was two hours before Rumsey admitted he and his friend had made a deal in which the friend would admit being the driver when, in fact, Rumsey had been.

Fined $100 for being impaired while having care and control of a vehicle was 18-year-old Robert James Harrop, 7048 Bickstan Place.

Harrop was also placed on six months probation and ordered to take the impaired drivers' course and perform 50 hours of community service work.

He also was fined $125 for possession of marijuana.

Crown counsel Martha McNeely said 10 grams was found in a baggie which was on the floorboard of the vehicle which was stopped by Sidney RCMP after officers saw it heading the wrong direction on a one-way street Dec. 23.

Suit sparked by St. Bernard

A 79-year-old woman told B.C. Supreme Court Thursday she was bowled over by a 125-pound St. Bernard dog in James Bay Oct. 29, 1978, while walking home from the beach with her husband.

Agnes Martin is suing the Lowe family, including 18-year-old Matthias Lowe who purchased the dog, for liability and damages for a broken pelvis and residual lower back pain.

She told Mr. Justice J.G. Ruttan the dog ran between her legs, carried her along, and she fell to the ground. She spent five days in hospital and said she still has terrible pain.

Lowe said he was walking to a bus stop with a friend and the dog, which was not on a leash. He didn't see what happened to Mrs. Martin until she was on the ground and he went over to her.

He said the dog was well-behaved and had never attacked anyone.

Victor Simpson, Mrs. Martin's lawyer, said there was a breach of duty because for some reason the dog ran between her legs and knocked her over. He said the city bylaw requires dogs to be on a leash or under the control of a competent person and argued the dog was not under control.

Ronald Barber, counsel for the Lowes, said there was no liability because there was no previous propensity known by the family that the dog might knock someone over, if the dog did that. He said it was simply a regrettable accident but not negligence.

If negligence was found, he said, damages should be in the area of $1,000 to $4,000.

Ruttan reserved his decision.

New attitude saving grace

A 19-year-old who pleaded guilty to possession of a stolen credit card was told Thursday by Judge E.J.C. Stewart in county court that his rehabilitation is the most important consideration.

He sentenced Lindsay Stewart Thompson to a nominal one day in jail after being told the offender had changed his state of mind which was contemptuous of the law.

"If he hasn't," said Stewart, "he'll be back."

Josef Kranjec of Toronto had one of those days nothing went right. To start, his house and two neighboring houses were set on fire by a three-year-old playing with matches. Kranjec was at work, but when he heard about the fire, he rushed home in his car — which skidded on ice, hit a hydrant and flipped, breaking his leg. Damage to the three houses was $10,000.

Actress Hedy Lamarr has filed a $10-million suit in San Francisco claiming she was libelled with a Chronicle story and photograph of a two-headed goat named Hedy Lamarr. The suit alleges the defendants maliciously intended to destroy the 65-year-old actress's "image as the very personification, essence and epitome of beauty."

Lamarr

John Phillips, a member of the Mamas and Papas singing group of the 1960s, has been issued a warning ticket for driving his Cadillac with its headlights off. Greenwich, Conn. police said the 44-year-old Greenwich resident is currently free on bond in another case. He and his wife, Genevieve, 31, were arrested at their home and charged with stealing Phillips' eight-year-old son, Tamerlane, from his legal guardian in California.

Science writer Belinda Dumont sees a sinister side to all the progress claimed in recent years by the medical establishment. "Modern medicine is a nightmare. Advances often cause disasters worse then the disease. In the United States, deaths from prescription drugs now equal those from breast cancer," she says in the February Omni.

Actress Anna Maria Alberghetti is credited with assisting Los Angeles police in the arrest of a man wanted on murder charges in Cleveland. Russell Legrand, 25, was taken into custody in Los Angeles on a charge of unlawful flight. Police had been tipped off that he was living in a Skid Row hotel and that Legrand's girl-friend was seeking domestic employment. Detectives called people who were hiring domestics. Their first call went to Miss Alberghetti, who had just hired a woman matching the description of Legrand's girl-friend. She gave police the woman's telephone number, which turned out to be the number of the hotel where Legrand was staying.

abby

Dear Abby:

I recently visited our daughter who has a 2-month-old baby girl. I took some pictures of the mother bathing the baby.

After returning home I took the pictures to a longtime friend and neighbor woman who has never had any children. She looked at the picture of the baby being bathed and said, "You should not be showing this around. It is pornography!"

Abby, I was shocked, and told her so. How can a picture of a naked baby be pornography? An innocent little baby's body is a beautiful sight, and there is nothing dirty or pornographic about it.

Shocked and Confused

Dear Shocked:

Pornography is the depiction of erotic behavior, intending to cause sexual excitement. If a picture of a 2-month-old baby being bathed created that kind of response, the "pornography" is in her mind.

Dear Readers:

Following herein, The Child's 10 Commandments for Parents:

1) My hands are small; please don't expect perfection whenever I make a bed, draw a picture, or throw a ball. My legs are short; please slow down so that I can keep up with you.

2) I have not seen the world as you have; let me explore safely: don't restrict me unnecessarily.

3) Housework will always be there. I'm only little for such a short time — take time to explain things to me about this wonderful world, and do so willingly.

4) My feelings are tender; please be sensitive to my needs; don't nag me all day long. (You wouldn't want to be nagged for your inquisitiveness.) Treat me as you would like to be treated.

5) I am a special gift; please treasure me as Nature intended you to do, holding me accountable for my actions, giving me guidelines to live by, and disciplining me in a loving manner.

6) I need your encouragement, but not your praise, to grow. Please go easy on the criticism; remember, you can criticize the things I do without criticizing me.

7) Please give me the freedom to make decisions concerning myself. Permit me to fail, so that I can learn from my mistakes. Then someday I'll be prepared to make the kind of decisions life requires of me.

8) Please don't do things over for me. Somehow that makes me feel that my efforts didn't quite measure up to your expectations. I know it's hard, but please don't try to compare me with my brother or my sister.

9) Please don't be afraid to leave for a weekend together. Kids need vacations from parents, just as parents need vacations from kids. Besides, it's a great way to show us kids that your marriage is working.

10) Please take me to school and become involved, setting a good example for me to follow. I enjoy learning about the world and myself.

Moms begin march Sunday

By BRENDA DALGLISH

What does Connie Meadmore, a Victoria housewife, have in common with Wayne Bull, a young man paralysed from the neck down as a result of a diving accident?

They both value the work done by the Kinsmen Rehabilitation Foundation of B.C.

The foundation, which is noticed each year about this time when the Mothers' March fund raising campaign takes place, works year-round to provide physically handicapped people with much-needed equipment and services.

For Wayne Bull the foundation provided an Enco IV electronic environmental unit. The name may be complicated but the services it assists Bull with are basic.

It allows him, by head movement to make contact with a touch-sensitive switch, to call a nurse, switch on television and radio and work the fan and lighter by his bed in the extended-care wing of the Gorge Road Hospital.

The machine was expensive and without the Foundation's assistance Bull wouldn't have it.

Without Meadmore, and other people like her, the foundation wouldn't have had money to buy the machine.

For the last 24 years Meadmore has been canvassing or organizing canvassers for the Mothers' March. The March is the main source of funding for the foundation.

This year door-to-door canvassers will be on the streets starting this Sunday until Feb. 2 hoping to raise more than a one million dollars for the Foundation. Last year the March raised about $700,000.

The foundation, which has been operating for 28 years, provides assistance to those people who can't be helped by other organizations. It's purpose is to assist in the rehabilitation of the physically handicapped.

It provides small items like canes and wheel chairs as well as complicated technical aids like Bull's electronic environmental unit.

Last year the foundation provided more than 1,000 canes and wheelchairs and helped 147 people with more complicated and expensive technical aids.

It also organizes a variety of activities, including sports events, for the handicapped.

The foundation tries to help the handicapped in ways that give them more independence. Meadmore said she works for the Mothers' March because, "I get a lot of satisfaction from knowing that it's helping disabled people become more independent."

Canvassers will be going door-to-door starting tomorrow with a blitz day on Jan. 30. Appeals will also be made at businesses. Anyone willing to spend an hour to help with canvassing should contact the foundation at 383-1323.

MARCHING MOTHER Linda Chatton of 898 Snowdrop in Victoria has more than a little faith in the annual drive of the Kinsmen Rehabilitation Foundation of B.C. Here she poses with son Nicky, four, who was just six-weeks-old when his father Stephen became a quadriplegic as the result of a car accident. The foundation has provided Stephen, now a part-time student at the University of Victoria, with the Tosc II unit pictured here. The device enables him to operate his tape recorder, television, intercom, lights and radio to give him a greater measure of independence in his daily life.

Darwin series for home learning

B.C.'s Open Learning Institute has collaborated with the Public Broadcasting Service in offering a non-credit course on the discoveries and impact of Charles Darwin.

Called The Voyage of Charles Darwin, the BBC-produced television component of the course begins this Sunday, Jan. 27, at 8 p.m. on Cable 9 and runs every Sunday for seven weeks.

OLI is making available a viewer's guide to enhance viewers' perception of the series which delves into the conflict between science and religion while exploring the development of Darwin's theory of evolution.

The guide is designed for the interested home viewer as well as for the high school or college instructor and contains an epilogue on the life of Darin, a section on the impact of Darwin's theories, a summary of each television episode and suggested readings and topics for discussion.

Based on Darwin's around-the-world voyage on the Beagle, the television series follows the oft-times heated debate between Darwin and Robert FitzRoy, captain of the Beagle and a man who believed in a static view of creation.

The Viewer's Guide can be obtained by sending $2 to: Continuing Education, Open Learning Institute, Box 94,-000, Richmond, B.C., V6Y 2A2.

Caution needed with irradiated skin

By Dr. L. L. COLEMAN

I had a mastectomy operation last year. This was followed by X-ray radiation. I love the sun and am distressed because I can't find any positive agreement as to whether it is safe for any winter exposure to the sun.

Mrs. R.P.R.

Dear Mrs. R.:

I was able to track down, in a recent edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association, the reaction of two specialists ... one a dermatologist and the other a radiologist.

Dr. Gerald Gellin, a skin specialist in San Francisco, said, "The irradiated skin of the chest wall of a patient with breast cancer is altered permanently. It is more likely to develop skin cancer than non-irradiated skin in the same area ... With the use of appropriate chemcial sunscreens, exposure to the sun should be minor risk. Of course, excessive sun exposure should be avoided."

Dr. R. H. Greenlaw, of Marshfield, Wis., a radiologist, said, "It is sensible for any fair-skinned person to avoid intentional intense and protracted exposure to sun. The person with irradiated skin should be especially cautious. Modest exposure, however, even those leading to some tanning, should not necessarily be denied the person who has recovered from radiation exposure."

The essence of these opinions obviously lies in not overdoing the exposure to the sun.

Dear Doctor:

My father has a clogged artery in the neck. The doctor thinks that before long an operation will be necessary. Is it really possible to do this without endangering his life?

Miss S.S.T.

Dear Miss T.:

Even the most sophisticated doctors are overwhelmed by the amazing surgical techniques that are available today. Operations on the heart and the blood vessels are almost as common as appendectomies.

Arteries of the neck that are blocked with calcium deposits can be opened and the blocked portion reamed out. the clogging plaque is removed and the blood supply to the artery is completely restored.

Sometimes, a portion of a blood vessel is removed and replaced with a dacron "sleeve." In other cases, a part of a vein, usually taken from the leg, is removed and used to by-pass a blocked artery.

The safety of modern anesthesia, coupled with the brillant techniques of surgery — many of which are performed under the microscope — offer a great deal of hope to those who previously might have suffered without any possibility of help.

soap opera scene

By JOHN GOUDAS

In this, the last week in the 28-year history of Love of Life, one of TV's daytime staples, the trials of the citizenry of Rosehill will cease to exist.

When queried about the show's February 1 demise, Mark Pinter (Tom Crawford) said, "Cast and crew have suffered a real loss but television has also suffered a loss. I think just a bit of television history will be lost to the viewers. I've never really understood why our industry has allowed itself to be totally dominated by the ratings game."

Lloyd Battista (Ray Slater) waxed philosophical and said, "In a time and place where most groups and institutions fostering or presenting creativity are being thwarted both financially and artistically — the plug has been pulled on yet another beacon."

Director Larry Auerbach aptly quipped, "Send some moose tranquilizers to my house care of CBS — remember the crew also."

Christopher Wyatt, the last regular to be hired in the role of Joel Corwin said, "Life goes on — I'll see you when I get to L.A. or vice versa."

AUERBACH
. . .moose tranquilizer

In addition to the present cast, which takes a back seat to none currently on the air, some of the stars who got their first break on the soap include: Warren Beatty, Peter Falk, Carl Betz, Jessica Walter, Marsha Mason, Anne Jackson, Roy Scheider, Bert Convy, Christopher Reeve, Nancy Marchand, Tony Lo Bianco, Paul Michael Glaser, Beatrice Straight, and Robert Alda.

In TV, which measures success and failure in a matter of weeks, the 28-year-run of Love of Life will remain a milestone that will be hard to surpass — and even if it is, a challenger would be faced with the mark being established by Search for Tomorrow, which started three weeks earlier than Love of Life and is still going strong.

Channel Chatter: The prison sequences on One Life to Live involving Brad Vernon, played by actor Steve Fletcher, were done on location, specifically, at the Bergen County Jail in Hackensack. Some of the people in the background shots are actual inmates who gave Steve some pointers on how to make a fight scene more realistic.

That recent Wade Bookstore fire on As The World Turns marked the daytime debut of veteran television and screen actor Michael Forest. His character Nick Andropolous was severely burned while saving Melinda Gray, but viewers have yet to see the last of this attractive actor. Andropolous manages the new restaurant, The Plaka, and looms as a possible new romance for Melinda...

youth clinic

Dear Dr. Cotter: My trouble started last summer. I took a course and I met a guy. I was 13 and he was 15. Things were great until school started. Often he would wait for me after school.

My girlfriend was jealous and told him off. She told him I hated him and she talked me out of liking him. He was deeply hurt. In March I had a crush on another guy, but he used me and I was hurt. My other girlfriend told me my first friend was hurt. I sent him a letter saying I was sorry.

You know what he said? Nothing. He told my girlfriend, "I didn't write back because I can't write." He told me he wasn't interested in girls. Bull. He's going on 16 and he likes a 10-year-old.

Next, I seem to be flowing from my family. We never play games like cards or anything. My mom's always too tired. I fight twice as much with my sister. I hardly ever talk. I just mope around. Please help.

Answer: First get your act together at home. If your mom is tired, then start doing some jobs for her without making a fuss about it. Then she may have some time for you and you will not have time to mope.

Secondly, don't talk so much to unreliable people about your friendships.

But the ones who are not reliable and blab to each other, ignore.

Dear Dr. Powell: I'm a 17-year-old girl who has an embarrassing problem. I've got long black hair around my nipple on my bust. I would like to know if the hairs would grow back if I plucked them out with eyebrow pluckers? It gets pretty embarrassing when I have to take showers after gym at school. Help!

Answer: Many women have a few hairs, long and coarse, growing around their nipples. Some women have hair on their abdomens and on their upper thighs. This is sometimes referred to as a masculine pattern of body hair and can be embarrassing for women. This hair growth occurs as a result of stimulation of hormones produced by the glands. It is usually only embarrassing and is nothing to be concerned about.

There are two ways of getting rid of hair: One is a temporary removal by shaving, cutting or plucking.

A few hairs can be pulled out with tweezers, a lot can be removed by shaving, or using chemical hair remover or depilatories. The hair grows back, however, and the process has to be repeated every few days.

The hair grows from a hair follicle and will keep growing unless the follicle is destroyed. Permanent hair removal involves destruction of this follicle and sometimes is done by a procedure called electrolysis.

Your family doctor is one of the best people to go to for advice. You might prefer going to a clinic which specializes in health care for people your age. This might be a youth clinic or an adolescent clinic at a hospital. Ask your school nurse whether there is a clinic you can attend in your area.

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel including Marion Powell, physician; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and social worker Bruce Vichert.

Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria V8W 2N4. Readers wishing to talk with someone about their problems can call NEED at 386-6233.

volunteering

The Victoria Volunteer Bureau has received requests for volunteers to fill the following positions:

An organization promoting greater awareness of third world concerns is looking for volunteers who have lived in developing countries to give presentations, primarily to school classes.

A shelter for women in crisis needs a donations worker to solicit donations of furniture and household effects and a storage place for these items. The objective is to help women find the furniture and effects they need to set up housekeeping and the volunteer would match donations with items needed by the women.

An environmental centre would like a volunteer with arts or public relations experience to plan and prepare educational and display materials on environmental topics and issues. The materials would be used in schools and for lectures and diplays.

A musical theatre society needs board members who would be willing to actively work on fundraising events and publicity. The board members would also attend monthly board meetings.

An organization promoting safety is looking for volunteers who have an interest in this area to form a committee to generate ideas for fundraising and increasing memberships. Those with artistic ability could design and prepare posters and other display material.

An organization providing information about cancer needs assistance with its educational and public relations programs. Volunteers could become involved in a variety of areas, such as public speaking, staffing small displays, and arranging publicity.

A foster parent recruitment progam would like volunteers to assist with public relations. Volunteers might choose to become involved in research, public speaking, arranging presentatins, putting up posters, or other public relations activities.

An international organization raising funds for programs for children overseas and providing education for the local community needs volunteers to undertake various forms of publicity.

Those who would like more information about volunteering, in these or other areas, are invited to contact the Victoria Volunteer Bureau at 386-2269. The office is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday to Friday.

Money habits are important. Money worries can lead to bickering and quarrelling in the home, break up of families and make lives miserable. Yet others live quite well on the same amount of money.

How do they do it?

Planning is important. Not everybody who manages his or her money wisely is on a budget, but for those who find money management difficult a budget or money management plan may be necessary. Money planning forms and literature are available from many banking institutions and social service offices as well as from public libraries.

Establishing priorities is the first step in planning. What do you really want? Practical, consistent self-discipline is essential to good money management. Those who live well on their income resist impulses to indulge themselves or impress others and concentrate on what is really important to their own values.

Teaching children that money must be earned and spent wisely is also essential. Children should be a part of money discussions so they know money is limited and must be spent according to plan; otherwise, they might pressure parents into buying what they can't afford and as teenagers they may run up bills which parents must pay.

This topic is one of 135 taped by Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada.

For the entire tape, telephone Victoria Consumer Infotel, 592-1251, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and until 4 p.m. Friday. Ask for tape C35. A complete list of tape topics available in the Victoria free calling area can be picked up at any Greater Victoria public library, or either of the provincial or federal consumer and corporate affairs offices in Victoria.

FRENCH IMMERSION

Beginning in September, 1980, School District No. 63 (Saanich) will offer a French Immersion Program at the Kindergarten and Grade 1 levels providing there is sufficient enrolment.

Basically immersion implies a classroom in which instruction is given in French by a bi-lingual teacher who is a native speaker of French or who has acquired natural fluency in the French language.

With each successive year a larger proportion of the curriculum is taught in English until a balance is reached between the time devoted to instruction in each language.

Parents should note that no special transportation allowance will be provided.

Before deciding in which school the program is to be located it is necessary to have additional information regarding prospective students. If you plan to enrol your child in the program, please complete the form below and return it by Friday, February 15, 1980 to:

wheels

Dear Mike:

Five months after I bought my new 1977 Jeep CJ-7, it became hard to start. When I turned the key, the starter would spin but wouldn't make contact. The dealer eventually replaced the flywheel ring gear and starter Bendix after finding that a 5-inch section of flywheel gear teeth had been stripped off. The same thing happened again about five months after that. And the same dealer repaired it. Now, 18 months later, I can hear those same familiar sounds. The dealer doesn't know what's causing the flywheel teeth to shear off, and he's becoming less co-operative each time. Should I trade this Jeep off, or is there some hope?

—Tooth Decay

Dear Tooth:

If the starter bolt holes weren't drilled properly at the factory, the starter gear teeth and the engine flywheel might barely be meshing. And if they're only touching lightly, the leverage can easily break off individual teeth. Once one tooth goes, it makes its next-door neighbor engage that much harder, which then breaks it — and so on down the line. The same thing can happen if the starter is cocked slightly on its mounting plate. Have your mechanic check for bolt-hole placement and starter alignment.

Dear Mike:

I've read your column for years and have noticed that people occasionally askyou fo)r ways to clean oil spots off driveways and garage floors. Here's another thought on that subject. Buy a bag of kitty litter. Sprinkle it on the moist spot and rub it in with your shoe. Half an hour later, sweep it up. You'll be surprised at how well it cleans!

— Grandma.

Dear Grams:

Thanks.

Dear Mike:

My 1977 Malibu V-8 makes popping noises — like popcorn popping — for two to three minutes after I turn off the engine. These sounds seem to be coming from underneath the frame. The car has made these sounds since new and runs well in every respect. Carburetor and exhaust hydrocarbons check out fine. The dealer's mechanic can't come up with a reason for these popping sounds. Any ideas?

—Popper

Dear Popper:

Probably heat expansion in the exhaust system, possibly in the area of the catalytic converter or its heat shield; nothing to worry about.

Dear Mike:

Why do auto engineers tilt their engines? Like the Slant Six. Why Slant? And why did they slant it in the wrong direction? It's so hard to get at the plugs and distributor.

—Straight Up & Down

Dear Straight:

Tilting an engine sometimes makes for a lower hood line and lower centre of gravity. Chrysler's decision to cant the Slant Six to the right had to do with the "banana" intake manifold, which gives a ram effect. As you know, many of today's cars use canted engines, including the VW Rabbit, GM X-Cars, Audi, Saab, Porsche 924, and others.

Please feel free to send your automotive questions to Wheels, care of Michael Lamm, Box 7607-B, Stockton, Calif. 95207. Due to the volume of mail, not all letters can be answered personally. Those of broadest reader interest will appear in future columns.

Iran holds first election under Islam constitution

TEHRAN (CP) — Ayatollah Khomeini cast his ballot from a Tehran hospital early today as voting got under way in Iran's first-ever presidential election.

About 20 million Iranian citizens aged 16 and older were eligible to vote for the eight candidates seeking to become the chief executive under the country's new Islamic constitution.

Results are not likely to be clear until Monday and if no candidate obtains more than 50 per cent of the vote there will be a run-off between the two leading contenders on Feb. 8.

There were no reported incidents halfway through election day although about three million voters in Kurdestan province were not voting as a protest against the central government.

However, the powers of the new president remain unclear as the constitution — approved in a referendum last month — vests supreme power in Khomeini.

The religious leader and head of Iran's year-old revolutionary government appeared on national radio and television Thursday to urge countrymen to vote and rally round the winner.

His appearance, after entering hospital the previous night suffering from a heart ailment, was widely interpreted by observers as an effort to allow voting day to proceed smoothly.

Those casting ballots were required to produce identity cards to receive blank ballots stamped on both sides to prevent illegal votes. Before writing the name of their choice on the ballots, voters who are illiterate were fingerprinted as an added precaution.

Those who could not read or write, estimated at about half the population, were required to be accompanied by a citizen who wrote in the designated candidate.

The powerful Moslem clergy were forbidden from instructing the illiterate how to vote although their pronouncements in recent weeks especially in outlying regions undoubtedly were followed.

Violence rises in Rhodesia

SALISBURY (AP) — Bishop Abel Muzorewa threatened today to pull his 16,000-member militia force out of the Rhodesian ceasefire pact amid reports of mounting violence across the country.

Muzorewa, launching his bid to become prime minister in next month's election, accused the current British governor, Lord Soames, of allowing widespread black nationalist guerrilla violations of the truce.

Muzorewa, Rhodesia's first elected black prime minister, gave up the post under terms of the British-sponsored truce agreement with the Patriot Front guerrilla alliance.

He says the guerrillas, who have gathered at assembly camps, are responsible for the growing violence in Rhodesia, including at least five attempted political killings. The guerrillas, in turn, say Muzorewa's militiamen are behind the national crime wave.

Meanwhile, London sources said Britain is seeking withdrawal of South African troops deployed north of the Beit Bridge inside Rhodesia under combined United States and Commonwealth pressure.

Diplomatic sources said South Africa was expected to agree and recall its forces within days, but this could not be independently confirmed.

Maguire buried

BELFAST (Reuter) — Hundreds of mourners from Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic packed a church here Thursday for a funeral mass for Anne Maguire, mother of the three children whose deaths led to the formation of the Northern Ireland Peace Movement four years ago.

Mrs. Maguire, 34, committed suicide in her Belfast home Monday.

Around her coffin, on which was placed a single candle, sat leaders of the Peace Movement including its co-founder, Mairead Corrigan, Mrs. Maguire's sister.

Mrs. Maguire was buried beside her children, who were crushed to death by a car when its Irish guerrilla driver was fatally shot by a British soldier.

Tito healing fast

BELGRADE (AP) — President Tito is recovering so rapidly from last weekend's amputation of his left leg that he has resumed "some of his duties," the official Tanjug news agency said today.

The 87-year-old Yugoslav leader was "further improving and feels well," the news agency said in a report from Ljubljana, the northern city where Tito underwent the amputation last weekend after doctors were unable to clear up a circulatory problem in his leg.

"President Tito is being informed on most important questions of our country and the world," Tanjug said.

Egyptian flag raised in Sinai

TEL AVIV (AP) — The Israeli flag was lowered and the Egyptian flag raised today over a 15,000-square-kilometre section of the Sinai Peninsula, clearing the way for normalization of relations between the two former enemies.

The Israeli withdrawal, the last of a five-stage Sinai pullback over nine months, left two-thirds of the vast peninsula in Egyptian hands. Israel is to evacuate the rest of the peninsula in 1982.

In a brief change-of-command ceremony at Refidim, once a major Israeli air base, Brig.-Gen. Dan Shomron said the Israeli pullback was an "expression of our earnestness to reach peace."

The zone evacuated includes the Mitla and Gidi passes, which Israeli forces took in the 1956 and 1967 Middle East wars. The passes, still littered with rusting military wreckage, are the main approaches from the western Sinai close to the Suez Canal to the level desert plain that abuts Israel's Negev Desert.

Israel's withdrawal also marked the end of the United Nations Emergency Force, which had up to 4,000 men monitoring the Sinai buffer zone created after the 1973 Middle East war. Egyptian forces now control the former buffer.

The Egyptian-Israeli treaty had envisioned an armed U.N. force to man the new buffer zones between Israel and Egypt, but the Soviet Union, with its veto power in the U.N. Security Council, blocked the plan.

Oil slick traced to death ship

WRANGELL, Alaska (AP) — Oil found at Port Alexander on the tip of Baranof Island this week was the same as that which spilled from an ore freighter which capsized off the British Columbia coast, a United States Coast Guard official said Thursday.

Ray Spoltman, said an analysis of samples taken from the Port Alexander oil slick matched those taken from the area where the Lee Wang Zin capsized with a loss of 30 crew members.

There have been conflicting reports on the size of the slick at Port Alexander, but Spoltman said it was relatively small when compared with the spill from the ore freighter.

During a survey of the area, the coast guard and Crowley Environmental Services, the firm hired to clean up the slick, found that Port Alexander residents had recovered most of the oil on the beaches, Spoltman said.

He said the coast guard believed there was little or no environmental damage to Port Alexander as a result of the spill.

WATSON
STEP-ON-AIRS
Men, you should try a Watson Step-On-Air. It's one of the most interesting shoes to come on the market in the last decade. Why? Because it's one of the very few designs that can be worn easily with a broad range of clothing styles. And, as an added bonus, this shoe provides comfort. In fact, the manufacturer claims it's the "most comfortable shoe ever made".
Try a pair — They could be right.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

5—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Check-up time for tubers, corms

hilda beastall

Roots of dahlias and other flowering plants carefully put into storage weeks ago, must not be entirely neglected. While we think forward to working again with the garden soil we must not forget that probably three months will pass before dahlia tubers and gladiolus corms can be planted. Sandy light soil or sloping ground may be three weeks earlier.

In the meantime, tubers and corms must be kept as cool as possible to prevent premature sprouting. Cool for this purpose means between three and five deg. C in a fairly dry place. Fairly dry is another comparative term, here it means enough humidity to prevent shrinking of dahlia tubers and of gladiolus corms, but not damp enough to develop rot or mold.

The more comforts gardeners demand in the homes, the fewer suitable winter storage places for plants. Basements with a portion of earth floor were ideal, situated away from the furnace with little or no insulation. The earth floor remained cool, never became really dried, temperature was right, and tubers kept well upended on dry planks.

There are a few homes with similar conditions today but most gardeners improvise to gain the desired environment for storage.

Checking dahlia tubers is a job to do leisurely, for each one needs handling carefully to spot softness or molding. Discard these damaged ones or cut off pieces with a sharp knife; dust the cut surface with powdered charcoal from a wood fire.

Disinfect the knife blade after each cut, using strong soap and water. Also avoid moving the spores or infected juice by hand to clean tubers or storage area.

If tubers should appear shrivelled by too high heat, they can be soaked 24 hours in a pan of water. Then take them out, inspecting each closely as it is dried with old soft towelling.

Lay out the tubers again for storage, remembering to check and turn them more often in the weeks ahead. If thought necessary, the tubers could be covered with dry peat after a week's exposure; this would avoid contact with dry air in storage place, but the peat would perhaps extract moisture from the tubers under some conditions. They would still need close checking.

Gladiolus corms need similar attention. They too should be plump and showing only the signs of sprout at the top. There should be no elongation of the sprout yet. Corms protected with their fibrous tunics will stand a little drier air in storage, but no higher heat.

If corms appear shrivelled they may be saved by soaking in water for eight to 10 hours. They will need quick drying on a table with a fan blowing warm air over them. Otherwise there may be moisture remaining among the fibres of the tunics.

To prevent another period of shrivelling before planting time, gladiolus corms may be covered with dry sand as they are laid out in shallow boxes (flats) raised a few inches above concrete level in a basement. A single layer with the corms spaced is the safest method.

Frequent checking of stored plant material from fall to spring is essential to discover first signs of damage and to prevent it from spreading.

Even here on the coast these tubers and corms are out of the soil for six months, and they need checking to help them come through unharmed.

No charges for Sakharov

MOSCOW (AP) — Andrei Sakharov, banished to the city of Gorky in a Kremlin bid to silence its most outspoken critic, will not face criminal charges, a senior Soviet official said today.

Vitali Kobysh, chief of the U.S. section of the International Department of the Communist party central committee told The Associated Press that Sakharov, a nuclear physicist who helped develop the Soviet hydrogen bomb, also will be free to continue his scientific work.

The patriarch of the human-rights movement in the Soviet Union, Sakharov was banished Tuesday to the Volga port city, 400 kilometes east of Moscow, which is closed to foreigners.

There was speculation he might be put on trial after the government newspaper Izvestia accused him Wednesday of "blurting out" state secrets to Westerners. The newspaper stopped just short of calling him a traitor.

Kobysh said in an interview that "proceeding from humane notions and taking into account his previous merits, he (Sakharov) will not be charged.

"Since he (Sakharov) is an academician, he will be able to continue his work," the official said.

Just before he was shipped off to Gorky, Sakharov was stripped of his state awards, although he remains a member of the Soviet Academy of Sciences.

Two more Soviet dissidents have been arrested and a third was hauled in for interrogation following the banishment of Sakharov.

Two members of the staff of the underground magazine Poiski (Inquiries), Yuri Grimm and Victor Sakirko were arrested in Moscow after police searched their apartments, other dissidents reported.

Their arrest was part of a campaign to make it impossible for dissidents to make contact with foreign visitors to the Summer Olympics.

The third dissident, Malva Landa, was called in for questioning in her home city of Vladimir, 175 kilometres northeast of Moscow. After her release, she told friends one of the police told her: "There's no Sakharov now, there's nobody to help you."

A nuclear physicist who helped develop the Soviet hydrogen bomb, Sakharov had vigorously and frequently criticized the Soviet government to Western reporters for 13 years. But apparently he went too far when, in a U.S. TV interview last week, he protested the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, supported President Carter's retaliatory measures and spoke approvingly of a boycott of the Olympics.

Can alcoholics drink? Opinion split in study

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Rand Corp. researchers said Thursday a new study modifies but does not contradict their highly controversial 1976 finding that some alcoholics can safely return to moderate drinking.

But the National Institute for Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, which paid $549,000 for the study, apparently got a different message and said the data prove its long-held belief that total, lifelong abstinence is the only way to treat alcoholism.

The latest research studied 800 men in 1977, four years after they were admitted to federally-funded treatment programs.

It found that 46 per cent of them were in remission during the six months before the study, including 28 per cent who had not had a drink in six months or more, and 18 per cent who were drinking moderately enough that they had no alcohol-related problems. Most had four drinks or less each day.

The 1976 report was based on the same group of patients, who were studied 18 months after beginning treatment. The report brought an instant storm of criticism from many alcoholism treatment groups. Critics, especially Alcoholics Anonymous, alleged the study misled many alcoholics into slipping tragically off the wagon.

Both the researcheers and the federal program agree there is a wide range of alcohol abusers, from those with only a slight physical dependence or none at all to the severely addicted.

And they seem generally to agree that the degree of a person's dependence on alcohol is a major factor in determining whether he can ever return to moderate drinking without problems.

Sociologist J. Michael Polich, who directed the Rand study, emphasized: "We said in this report, and in our previous report as well, that based on this data we do not recommend that any alcoholic resume drinking."

But, he said in an interview "we've shown there is a subgroup of alcoholics for whom moderate drinking or nonproblem drinking has a relatively good prognosies. Then there is another subgroup for whom that can be a very risky behavior."

He said the groups are roughly divided by age and level of dependence, as measured by such symptoms of withdrawal pains, blackouts and tremors.

Among those under age 40 and less dependent when treatment began, "relapse rates were lower among nonproblem drinkers than among abstainers," Polich said. The opposite was found for older men with greater dependence.

Co-worker Harriet Braiker said: "The most important point that we are making is that this is a complicated problem and it doesn't have simple solutions."

Tougher Carter eyes military aid to China

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's "get-tough" stance with the Soviet Union is entering a new phase with the announcement of possible sales of military equipment to China and with congressional approval of special trade relations with the world's most-populous nation.

The two moves Thursday came only one day after Carter warned Russia, in a televised address, to stay out of the oil-rich Persian Gulf area.

The House of Representatives also approved on a vote of 386 to 12 Thursday Carter's call for the United States to boycott the Summer Olympics in Moscow unless the Soviets end their occupation of Afghanistan. That move and the militay sales indicated not only administration resolve to halt further Soviet intrusions but also congressional backing of at least some steps toward punishing Russia for its intrusion.

Pentagon officials said, meanwhile, that Chinese officials have been told the United States is willing to sell them military equipment — but not weapons.

The U.S. officials, who asked not to be identified, said Defence Secretary Harold Brown told the Chinese during his recent visit to Peking that the United States is "prepared to consider on a case-by-case basis" such sales.

Although no decision has been made on what specific military goods might be sold, defence department spokesman Thomas Ross told reporters that the equipment might include trucks, communications gear and "certain types of early-warning radar."

A Pentagon official called the new sales policy an "incremental change" of position and a continuation of closer relations between the two countries.

He added: "You cannot, however, take it out of the context of the world situation. The Soviet occupation of Afghanistan sped up or catalysed the decision."

References to the Afghan situation were laced through the debate in both the House and Senate on the resolution giving most-favored-nation trade status to China.

Passage of the trade resolution means that the bilateral trade agreement signed by the United States and China on July 7, now goes into effect. It will reduce U.S. tariffs on Chinese goods to about 10.5 per cent from 20 per cent.

Elsewhere, an Afghan anti-government guerrilla leader proclaimed a "free Islamic republic" in four provinces of Afghanistan today and appealed for foreign military assistance to fight invading Soviet troops.

Zia Khan Nassry, 33, chairman of the Afghan Islamic and Nationalist Revolutional Council, told reporters in the Pakistani capital of Islamabad that his forces were in control of the four provinces except for a handful of cities occupied by Russian troops.

Nassry's proclamation appeared timed to coincide with the weekend opening of an emergency Islamic conference on the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

The guerrilla leaders are anxious to receive foreign military help.

Quake caused approach to an overpass near Livermore to drop several inches

Nuclear lab tank leaking as aftershocks jiggle Calif.

LIVERMORE, Calif. (UPI) — Rumbling aftershocks today rattled a nuclear research laboratory where a tank containing radioactive liquid cracked during a frightening earthquake Thursday.

Residents throughout the San Francisco Bay Area felt two sharp aftershocks at dawn after two earlier tremors late Thursday night.

Officials at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory, a principal laboratory for nuclear weapons, said a tank of "very, very low-level" tritium cracked in the initial earthquake Thursday morning.

It spilled some radioactive liquid into another container. A spokesman said there was no threat to public safety.

The quake Thursday injured at least 20 people, swayed skyscrapers in San Francisco and caused widespread minor damage in a 200-mile wide area of northern California.

The University of California Seismographic Center said the quake occurred at 11 a.m. PST Thursday and had a Richter magnitude of 5.5. A second quake, with a magnitude of 4.8, occurred 2 minutes later.

At 9:12 p.m. a third "moderate" shock occurred, with a magnitude of 4.6, and at 9:24 p.m. there was one with a 4.4 magnitude.

Other aftershocks occurred at 5:39 a.m. today, with a magnitude of 3.8, and again at 6:03 a.m., with a magnitude of 3.6

The leak of water laced with radioactive tritium at the Lawrence Livermore lab began Thursday at the rate of a quart a minute and dwindled today to several gallons an hour, lab spokesman Michael Ross said.

Ross said the radioactive tritium content of the water was about half the concentration permitted to be discharged into sewers under U.S. regulations.

Among the hardest hit areas was the Springtown Mobile Home Park where residents were evacuated after 133 units were shaken from their foundations.

Classes were held outside for some 12,000 students at 14 schools while officials checked for structural damage.

Mel Leach, a liquor store owner in nearby Dublin, was working in the vodka section of his warehouse when the quake hit. Moments later, gasping from the fumes of wine and liquor, he picked his way through shattered glass. More than 1,000 containers had crashed to the floor.

Noble denies service cuts

Deputy Human Resources Minister John Noble today denied claims by NDP MLAs that the ministry is planning cuts in social worker staff and services.

The claims were made by Victoria MLA Charles Barber and Burnaby-Edmonds MLA Rosemary Brown.

Barber said Thursday he's been told funding will be cut province-wide to various youth servies such as long-term foster care.

And Brown said human resources supervisors in Vancouver have been told they will have to release 75 of their social workers.

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy was not available for comment.

Noble today referred all questions about possible service cuts to the minister.

The deputy minister said 51 positions around the province have been identified for re-assignment.

"As these positions become vacant, they are allocated where they are most needed," he said.

This program has been under way for 18 months. Twenty-six of the positions have already been dealt with.

"That leaves 25 to be reassigned gradually as they become vacant," Noble said.

Meanwhile Noble had good news and bad news today for the Capital Region Association for the Mentally Handicapped.

The association has threatened to close its Langwood Activity Centre unless the province increases its financial support.

The bad news is that no rate increase will be considered until the ministry's new budget is approved.

At that time, Noble said, a rate increase for 75 such centres around the province will be studied.

The good news is the association's annual budget for its other facilities is being increased to $635,000 from $561,000 — exactly what it asked for.

Top brass top military beef

The command control of the Canadian Armed Forces is the issue most often raised at the public hearings being conducted by the task force on review of unification, chairman George Fyffe of Ottawa said here Thursday.

In an interview after the hearing at The Empress, Fyffe said the task force has discovered a list of common concerns during the two months it has been seeking public input.

But, said Fyffe, "the public doesn't seem much concerned about the hearings . . . only people who have had some past or present association with the military are talking to us."

Only three or four briefs, of more than 900 received, have come from the public, he said.

The military organization of the armed forces, in particular the command control, has been the major worry.

Other frequently mentioned concerns include:

— Identity and morale problems caused by the common uniform symbolizing the unification of the three traditional services of army, navy and air force.

— The practice since unification of giving the same basic training to all recruits regardless of their eventual line of duty.

— The operational readiness of the armed forces in the event of war.

— The method of handling support service personnel such as doctors, dentists, postal workers and others.

The four-man task force has been conducting hearings across the country and in military posts such as Cyprus, Brussels and Germany.

"Basically, we're hearing the same concerns although the degree of emotion with which they're presented varies with the individual's point of view," said Fyffe.

The task force has four more days of in-camera hearings, one in Victoria and three in Ottawa.

Energy plan endorsed

A broad energy conservation program drafted by Ald. Robin Blencoe was endorsed Thursday by Victoria city council's public works and energy conservation committee.

"I think it's the right direction," said Mayor Bill Tindall, who said the alderman had "done an excellent job in putting this together."

Blencoe's program calls for examination of higher insulation standards for all city buildings, solar alternatives, recycling and greater emphasis on transit and bicycles.

The committee referred it to city engineer John Sansom for further review.

Blencoe said he would work with city staff and report back periodically during the year on progress in cutting the city's energy bills.

Ald. Ron McKenzie said probably the first place Victoria could start is turning off lights in unused rooms. Blencoe said he's amazed at the number of office lights still burning long after businesses have closed for the day.

Sansom pointed out that lights stay on for the cleaning staff who remain in the buildings until 9 p.m. or later.

"Maybe they should be cleaned first thing in the morning."

Ald. Gretchen Brewin suggested turning down the thermostat at city hall "right now."

Tindall replied with a laugh: "Let's not get carried away."

Blencoe said if the city takes the lead in conserving energy, maybe Victoria will save some land in remote parts of B.C. from being floded for power dams.

The committee also gave its backing to Derrick Mallard, president of the Citizens Association to Save the Environment, in his bid for federal support for a local energy centre to provide engineering data, cost estimates and working drawings for conservation projects.

Street kids still a problem

The street kids controversy which burst into the headlines six months ago made another minor appearance Thursday at city hall but it seems relief for the problem is still some way off.

Ald. Gretchen Brewin's downtown community liaison committee gave moral support to a proposal made in November by the special youth committee to put two street workers downtown, but the question of paying them is up in the air.

The committee discussion centred mostly on the youth committee's other recommendation for a "social planning council" which would co-ordinate social services in the region.

It would try to alleviate future crises like the street kids problem. The youth committee highlighted the fact that the street kids had been largely neglected by the conventional social agencies, although police and some workers were trying their best.

Ald. Ron McKenzie said he wanted the city to stress the urgency of the situation, and was willing to spend city funds on an "outreach" program for youths in the downtown area.

In an interview today, Ald. Brewin said community groups already active in the area — the YMCA, the Boys and Girls Club — have proposals for extra street workers and will seek funds for them, probably from the human resources ministry although private foundations are a possible source too.

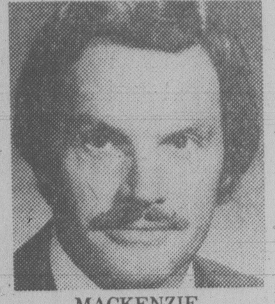
She said the workers should be downtown as soon as possible, especially by May when the weather improves and more youths will be attracted to the area.

"It's imperative that we get two street workers there soon," she told her council colleagues. "I'd like to know that the city cares."

Brewin said the social planning council which would supervise this type of work is going to take longer to establish, but a number of community groups and individuals are interested and working on it.

This new body would pull together all groups having anything to do with social services.

City taxi rates buck passed



MACKENZIE

Aldermen were reluctant Thursday to tackle the job of setting new rates for Victoria taxis and passed it to city staff for a recommendation.

Finance committee chairman Ald. Ron McKenzie said that ideally he would prefer the marketplace to take care of the problem.

"I think the ideal way is to run it like any other business, with free and open competition. Let the weak ones fall by the wayside," he said.

But the committee was told if it doesn't do the job, it will revert to the provincial Motor Carrier Commission.

Taxi owners' representative Bud MacLean said he would prefer it that way. Only Victoria and Vancouver set their own rates for cabs, he said.

Maclean and W.B. Woodward, president of Bluebird cabs, said they represented 80 per cent of the taxis in the city but claimed that the other 20 per cent also favor the rate hike.

Their proposal is for a 26 per cent increase in mileage to 70 cents per kilometre, a 10-cent hike in the flagfall charge of $1 and $3 on the present hourly waiting charge of $12. It is the first increase rrquested since March, 1978 (not 1979 as reported by the Times on Wednesday.)

Aldermen were curious about the economics of the cab business. Maclean told them it costs $20,000 to get into business here. Woodward said $40,000 gives you the right to put three cabs on the road if you buy into Bluebird. Both admitted there is a waiting list of interested investors.

"You're buying yourself a job," said MacLean.

"That's a lot of money for a job," said Ald. Robin Blencoe.

"How much do you pay for a grocery store?" he shot back. Investors were paying "for the good will of the company," he added.

New budget crisis at Jubilee

'No fat' estimate tops $50M

The Royal Jubilee Hospital's faces yet another budget crisis.

The board Thursday night set spending for the period from April, 1980, to April, 1981, at $51.2 million — $700,000 more than the provincial government is willing to pay.

And there are indications, the budget could jump by around another $5 million.

Contract talks involving nurses and members of the Hospital Employees Union could add an estimated 10 per cent to the budget.

At present, the spending plans contain no provision for wage increases or fringe benefits.

RJH board chairman Eric Simmons said today his board has to have the $51.2 million.

"We need that kind of money for the programs," Simmons said.

"The budget is sound, there is no fat in it and we believe we can prove that it is needed.

"Every program is important for the health of the public."

Simmons said the budget went to the health ministry today and he expects Norman Alban, the hospital's acting director of finances, will meet with hospital services' personnel to argue for the $51.2 million budget.

Simmons said the board is quite prepared to defend the budget with ministry officials.

Simmons said the nurses and hospital employees' contracts will undoubtedly end in additional costs.

"To try and put a percentage increase is very difficult," Simmons said.

"But there is some indication that it could well be 10 per cent."

Dr. Elinor Powell, chief of RJH's medical staff, said today she is confident the provincial government will approve the budget.

She said the recent relationship between RJH and the health ministry has been excellent and the ministry has appeared anxious to support the hospital's programs.

An ugly, happy reunion

SURREY (CP) — Ugliness has brought happiness to a Surrey woman.

When Joan Priddle first saw pictures of Melville Taylor mugging for an English photographer in a recent edition of the New Westminster Columbian, she thought: "What an ugly mug."

Her interest turned to shock, however, when she realized the "ugly mug" was her brother whom she had not seen in 34 years.

"I was flabbergasted," she said. "Who would ever have looked for a brother making a face like that?"

Taylor, billed as the "ugliest man in Britain," often entertains for charity by pulling his face out of shape. The pictures were carried in newspapers across England and North America.

Ms. Priddle, who last saw her brother before the family was separated at the end of the Second World War, said she had given up hope of locating him until she saw the pictures.

Ms. Priddle, 54, who lives on a disability pension as a result of a heart attack, couldn't afford a phone call to England so she asked for help from the newspaper.

Patrons in a pub in Taylor's hometown, Padiham, Lancashire, said Taylor didn't have a phone. However, reporters from a local newspaper found Taylor and arranged a long-distance telephone reunion.

Seattle rocked by blast

SEATTLE (AP) — An explosion, apparently touched off by gasoline fumes from a parking garage, shattered windows in an office building and rocked an area of downtown Seattle today.

No injuries were reported, said police Patrolman Don Phifer.

The explosion, in a parking garage which is part of the 23-storey Pacific Building in the heart of downtown, showered the street with shards of glass.

Vern Hindmarsh, building manager, said that at about 6 a.m., building operators discovered that vandals had punctured four gasoline tanks on vehicles at various levels of the parking garage.

Fumes from spilled gasoline drifted down through the garage to the ground floor lobby area, where they were ignited, possibly by electricity, Hindmarsh said.

"The concussion blew me out the front doors," said Hindmarsh, who was unhurt. The explosion occurred at about 6:55 a.m., he said.

Damage appeared extensive inside the lobby and glass was blown across the four-lane street. A ground-floor branch of Old National Bank had six-metre windows broken.

Hindmarsh said there was no immediate damage estimate.

At least two other persons were in the building at the time of the explosion.

Lonzo Fanony said he was in the Japan Line U.S.A. Ltd. office on the 22nd floor and "didn't know anything was going on."

He and another employee, who was not immediately identified, walked down the stairs and through a front emergency exit.

All persons who were in the building at the time have been accounted for, authorities said.

S. African police storm abductors

PRETORIA, South Africa (UPI) — Police firing machine guns stormed a bank and killed three black nationalists holding at least 20 hostages and demanding the release of political prisoners, authorities said.

It was the first time blacks in South Africa have taken hostages to try to win the release of political prisoners.

Witnesses said there were "many" casualties among the bank employees and customers in the Silverton branch of the Volkskas bank.

A police official said one of the gunmen may have detonated a hand grenade before he was killed, exploding it in the midst of the terrified, screaming hostages.

Shrieks of terror — soon drowned out by the roar of machine gun fire — were heard inside the bank as police SWAT teams stormed inside, ending the siege six hours after it began.

Several people ran or stumbled out of the bank, bleeding and clutching wounds as the sound of automatic weapons fire filled the air.

"They've shot my wife, They've shot my wife," screamed one hostage as police carried her our on a stretcher.

The siege began at 1:05 p.m. when three gunmen armed with hand grenades and Soviet-made AK-47 assault rifles stormed the bank and took between 20 and 40 persons hostage to demand the release of black nationalist prisoners held in South African jails.

About 30 minutes after seizing the bank, the gunmen released assistant manager J.S. Whitmore and a woman employee with a note containing their demands, a Volkskas official said.

Some 90 minutes later, they freed two more bank employees, who emerged from the front door of the three-story building stripped to their waists.

"The terrorists have not occupied the bank to stage a robbery as their demands are political," said Dr. D.P.S. Van Hu[illegible]en, director of the bank.

Van Huyssteen said the not[illegible]sent with the first two hostages demanded the release of black nationalist prisoners in South African jails. He would not disclose how many prisoners the gunmen were demanding be released.

But another security source said the prisoners wanted freed included the country's best-known political prisoner, Nelson Mandela, father of black nationalism in white-minority-ruled South Africa. They demanded that they and the prisoners then be flown to Angola, the source said.

Police confirmed only that the release of a prominent political prisoner had been demanded.

Mandela, 61, was convicted of trying to overthrow the white government and has been held for 17 years at the Robben Island prison in Cape Town's Table Bay, on the southwest coast.

Officials cordoned off the area around the bank and police snipers and SWAT teams surrounded the building, negotiating with the gunmen for about six hours before storming inside to end the siege by force.

U.S. prices jumped 13% during 1979

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices in the U.S. soared 13.3 per cent in 1979, the largest annual increase in 33 years, the government reported today.

The price surge, largely from energy and housing costs, far surpassed the 1978 gain of 9 per cent and the 4.8 per cent rate of 1976, the year before President Carter entered the White House.

It was the highest inflation jump in prices since the government removed Second World War price controls.

LONDON (AP) — Gold prices fell again today, declining to $668 U.S. — $773 Canadian — by the afternoon fix in London from a closing price of $717 on Thursday.

Exxon breaks $4B earnings barrier

NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp., the largest oil company in the United States, has become the first industrial company ever to earn more than $4 billion in a single year.

Exxon disclosed its earnings in a report today which showed the company enjoyed a 60-per-cent earnings gain for the fourth quarter of 1979 and an over-all 55-per-cent increase for the year over 1978 results.

The report followed announcements by several other major oil companies that the 1979 world oil price explosion resulted in sharply higher profits, with much of the earnings gains coming from operations overseas.

Exxon said its profits for the year totalled $4.295 billion, or $9.74 a share, up from $2.763 billion or $6.20 a share in 1978. Revenues rose 30 per cent to $84.350 billion.

For the fourth quarter, Exxon said its profits totalled $1.365 billion, or $3.10 a share, up from $853 million or $1.92 a share in the same period of 1978.

On Thursday, Texaco Inc., the third-largest oil company, and Gulf Oil Corp., ranked fifth, said their 1979 gains came after several years of lackluster performance.

Return on shareholders' equity for Gulf was 16.3 per cent in 1979, while Texaco's was 17.7 per cent. The average U.S. manufacturing company earned 16.7 per cent on shareholder's equity in the first nine months of 1979 the U.S. Federal Trade Commission says.

Texaco's fourth-quarter earnings rose 62.6 per cent to $533.9 million, or $1.97 a share, compared with $328.3 million, or 1.21 a share, a year before. Earnings for 1979 were $1.8 billion, or $6.48 a share, against $852.5 million, or $3.14 a share, in 1978.

Fourth-quarter earnings at Gulf were up by 54.4 per cent at $366 million, or $1.88 a share, compared with $237 million, or $1.22 a share, a year before. Earnings for 1979 were $1.32 billion, or $6.78 a share, up from $785 million, or $4.03 a share, in 1978.

Broken nose in purse grab

A 63-year-old [illegible] left wrist and broken nose in an attack by two young purse snatchers in Victoria Thursday night.

The suspects are believed to be about 10 or 12 years old.

Police said Mrs. Gladys Rogers was crossing the intersection at Tolmie and Rutledge when the two youngsters attacked her from behind.

They knocked her down and grabbed her purse containing about $4 - $5.

Mrs. Rogers, confined to bed in her apart[illegible] 212-3244 Quadra, said in an interview today her face hit the curb when she fell.

The next thing she remembers was a woman stopping her car and helping her to her feet.

"I didn't get a good look but I guess by their size they were 10 or 12 years old," she said.

The incident occurred about 5:45 p.m. as Mrs. Rogers was walking home from shopping at the nearby Mayfair shopping centre.

The unidentified motorist drove Mrs. Rogers to her apartment where the apartment manager contacted Saanich police.

An officer took Mrs. Rogers to Royal Jubilee Hospital where she was treated and released.

The two boys ran east on Tolmie towards Finlayson and disappeared.

Mrs. Rogers said she only had two $2 bills and some change in her purse but is more concerned about the loss of all her identification papers.

Meanwhile her doctor has told her she will have to keep the cast on her wrist six to eight weeks.

She gave police the woman's telephone number, which turned out to be the number of the hotel where Legrand was staying.

abby

Dear Abby:

I recently visited our daughter who has a 2-month-old baby girl. I took some pictures of the mother bathing the baby.

After returning home I took the pictures to a longtime friend and neighbor woman who has never had any children. She looked at the picture of the baby being bathed and said, "You should not be showing this around. It is pornography!"

Abby, I was shocked, and told her so. How can a picture of a naked baby be pornography? An innocent little baby's body is a beautiful sight, and there is nothing dirty or pornographic about it.

Shocked and Confused

Dear Shocked:

Pornography is the depiction of erotic behavior, intending to cause sexual excitement. If a picture of a 2-month-old baby being bathed created that kind of response, the "pornography" is in her mind.

Dear Readers:

Following herein, The Child's 10 Commandments for Parents:

1) My hands are small; please don't expect perfection whenever I make a bed, draw a picture, or throw a ball. My legs are short; please slow down so that I can keep up with you.

2) I have not seen the world as you have; let me explore safely: don't restrict me unnecessarily.

3) Housework will always be there. I'm only little for such a short time — take time to explain things to me about this wonderful world, and do so willingly.

4) My feelings are tender; please be sensitive to my needs; don't nag me all day long. (You wouldn't want to be nagged for your inquisitiveness.) Treat me as you would like to be treated.

5) I am a special gift; please treasure me as Nature intended you to do, holding me accountable for my actions, giving me guidelines to live by, and disciplining me in a loving manner.

6) I need your encouragement, but not your praise, to grow. Please go easy on the criticism; remember, you can criticize the things I do without criticizing me.

7) Please give me the freedom to make decisions concerning myself. Permit me to fail, so that I can learn from my mistakes. Then someday I'll be prepared to make the kind of decisions life requires of me.

8) Please don't do things over for [illegible] somehow that makes me feel that my efforts didn't quite measure up to your expectations. I know it's hard, but please don't try to compare me with my brother or my sister.

9) Please don't be afraid to leave for a weekend together. Kids need vacations from parents, just as parents need vacations from kids. Besides, it's a great way to show us kids that your marriage is working.

10) Please take me to school and become involved, setting a good example for me to follow. I enjoy learning about the world and myself.

Mom's begin march Sunday

By BRENDA DALGLISH

What does Connie Meadmore, a Victoria housewife, have in common with Wayne Bull, a young man paralysed from the neck down as a result of a diving accident?

They both value the work done by the Kinsmen Rehabilitation Foundation of B.C.

The foundation, which is noticed each year about this time when the Mothers' March fund raising campaign takes place, works year-round to provide physically handicapped people with much-needed equipment and services.

For Wayne Bull the foundation provided an Enco IV electronic environmental unit. The name may be complicated but the services it assists Bull with are basic.

It allows him, by head movement to make contact with a touch-sensitive switch, to call a nurse, switch on television and radio and work the fan and lighter by his bed in the extended-care wing of the Gorge Road Hospital.

The machine was expensive and without the Foundation's assistance Bull wouldn't have it.

Without Meadmore, and other people like her, the foundation wouldn't have had money to buy the machine.

For the last 24 years Meadmore has been canvassing or organizing canvassers for the Mothers' March. The March is the main source of funding for the foundation.

This year door-to-door canvassers will be on the streets starting this Sunday until Feb. 2 hoping to raise more than a one million dollars for the Foundation. Last year the March raised about $700,000.

The foundation, which has been operating for 28 years, provides assistance to those people who can't be helped by other organizations. It's purpose is to assist in the rehabilitation of the physically handicapped.

It provides small items like canes and wheel chairs as well as complicated technical aids like Bull's electronic environmental unit.

Last year the foundation provided more than 1,000 canes and wheelchairs and helped 147 people with more complicated and expensive technical aids.

It also organizes a variety of activities, including sports events, for the handicapped.

The foundation tries to help the handicapped in ways that give them more independence. Meadmore said she works for the Mothers' March because, "I get a lot of satisfaction from knowing that it's helping disabled people become more independent."

Canvassers will be going door-to-door starting tomorrow with a blitz day on Jan. 30. Appeals will also be made at businesses. Anyone willing to spend an hour to help with canvassing should contact the foundation at 383-1323.

MARCHING MOTHER Linda Chatton of 898 Snowdrop in Victoria has more than a little faith in the annual drive of the Kinsmen Rehabilitation Foundation of B.C. Here she poses with son Nicky, four, who was just six-weeks-old when his father Stephen became a quadriplegic as the result of a car accident. The foundation has provided Stephen, now a part-time student at the University of Victoria, with the Tosc II unit pictured here. The device enables him to operate his tape recorder, television, intercom, lights and radio to give him a greater measure of independence in his daily life.

Darwin series for home learning

B.C.'s Open Learning Institute has collaborated with the Public Broadcasting Service in offering a non-credit course on the discoveries and impact of Charles Darwin.

Called The Voyage of Charles Darwin, the BBC-produced television component of the course begins this Sunday, Jan. 27, at 8 p.m. on Cable 9 and runs every Sunday for seven weeks.

OLI is making available a viewer's guide to enhance viewers' perception of the series which delves into the conflict between science and religion while exploring the development of Darwin's theory of evolution.

The guide is designed for the interested home viewer as well as for the high school or college instructor and contains an epilogue on the life of Darin, a section on the impact of Darwin's theories, a summary of each television episode and suggested readings and topics for discussion.

Based on Darwin's around-the-world voyage on the Beagle, the television series follows the oft-times heated debate between Darwin and Robert FitzRoy, captain of the Beagle and a man who believed in a static view of creation.

The Viewer's Guide can be obtained by sending $2 to: Continuing Education, Open Learning Institute, Box 94,-000, Richmond, B.C., V6Y 2A2.

Runners who are turning out en masse at 9:30 every Sunday morning for the Royal Victoria Marathon training clinics at the YM/YWCA on Courtney may like to take time out from practice next Wednesday to watch a made-for-television comedy on marathoning.

Bob Newhart stars as a bemused, middle-aged husband who takes up running and winds up chasing a beautiful young woman, in Marathon, to be broadcast at 9 p.m. on the CBS Television Network.

Caution needed with irradiated skin

By Dr. L. L. COLEMAN

I had a mastectomy operation last year. This was followed by X-ray radiation. I love the sun and am distressed because I can't find any positive agreement as to whether it is safe for any winter exposure to the sun.

Mrs. R.P.R.

Dear Mrs. R.:

I was able to track down, in a recent edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association, the reaction of two specialists ... one a dermatologist and the other a radiologist.

Dr. Gerald Gellin, a skin specialist in San Francisco, said, "The irradiated skin of the chest wall of a patient with breast cancer is altered permanently. It is more likely to develop skin cancer than non-irradiated skin in the same area ... With the use of appropriate chemcial sunscreens, exposure to the sun should be minor risk. Of course, excessive sun exposure should be avoided."

Dr. R. H. Greenlaw, of Marshfield, Wis., a radiologist, said, "It is sensible for any fair-skinned person to avoid intentional intense and protracted exposure to sun. The person with irradiated skin should be especially cautious. Modest exposure, however, even those leading to some tanning, should not necessarily be denied the person who has recovered from radiation exposure."

The essence of these opinions obviously lies in not overdoing the exposure to the sun.

Dear Doctor:

My father has a clogged artery in the neck. The doctor thinks that before long an operation will be necessary. Is it really possible to do this without endangering his life?

Miss S.S.T.

Dear Miss T.:

Even the most sophisticated doctors are overwhelmed by the amazing surgical techniques that are available today. Operations on the heart and the blood vessels are almost as common as appendectomies.

Arteries of the neck that are blocked with calcium deposits can be opened and the blocked portion reamed out. the clogging plaque is removed and the blood supply to the artery is completely restored.

Sometimes, a portion of a blood vessel is removed and replaced with a dacron "sleeve." In other cases, a part of a vein, usually taken from the leg, is removed and used to by-pass a blocked artery.

The safety of modern anesthesia, coupled with the brillant techniques of surgery — many of which are performed under the microscope — offer a great deal of hope to those who previously might have suffered without any possibility of help.

Queen of disco in TV special

Donna in her special: Alive and More

Donna Summer, the reigning queen of disco, will star in her first network television special, The Donna Summer Special, on Sunday, Jan. 27, at 10 p.m., on Channel 4. With Robert Guillaume of Benson as her guest star and cameos by Debralee Scott, Twiggy and Pat Ast, the hour features the intense excitement of a concert attended by 17,000 cheering fans at the Hollywood Bowl.

In between, Donna demonstrates her musical range, which goes from lullabies, gospel songs and a medley of 1930s tunes to the crowd-thrilling beat of the sultry disco hits for which she is most famous.

The show opens with Donna as a young and somewhat naive girl singing I Found the Answer in a church similar to where she began her singing career, then flashes to the Hollywood Bowl where Donna can bring thousands to their feet prepared to dance wildly in the aisles with the first words of one of her biggest hits, Dim All the Lights.

Other highlights include:

- Donna and Robert Guillaume singing Bridge over Troubled Waters.
- Donna singing The Man I Love, I've Got it Bad and That Ain't Good and Some of These Days.

WHY SHOULD YOU BUY A HITACHI COLOUR TV?

The first reason would be because it has proven to be the most reliable TV on the market. It received top rating by one of the consumer magazines. In the last three years, we have had only one set break down which was a very minor problem. The second reason is the picture quality. Hitachi developed a new picture tube which gives you a brighter, sharper picture. The third reason is the exclusive 20-year warranty on all solid state parts and 3-year warranty on all parts and service. We service all our own sets and have special service rates based at cost for our own customers.

What kind of house CAN you get for under $50,000 these days?

There are houses on the market priced in the forties, and even a few in the thirties. Not mansions, 'tis true. This house, for example, is on a regulation size lot, has brick fireplace in the living room, 2 bedrooms on the main, one in the attic, kitchen with eating area, electric heat, new wiring, and has been freshly painted throughout. It has no basement, and the kitchen could use some more cabinets. Some shingles need replacing on the roof, and the floor is uneven in one or two spots, which could be remedied. Not perfect, but basically well-built. With a bit of fixing up and some garden work, it would be an extremely attractive small house. The asking price ? $44,500.

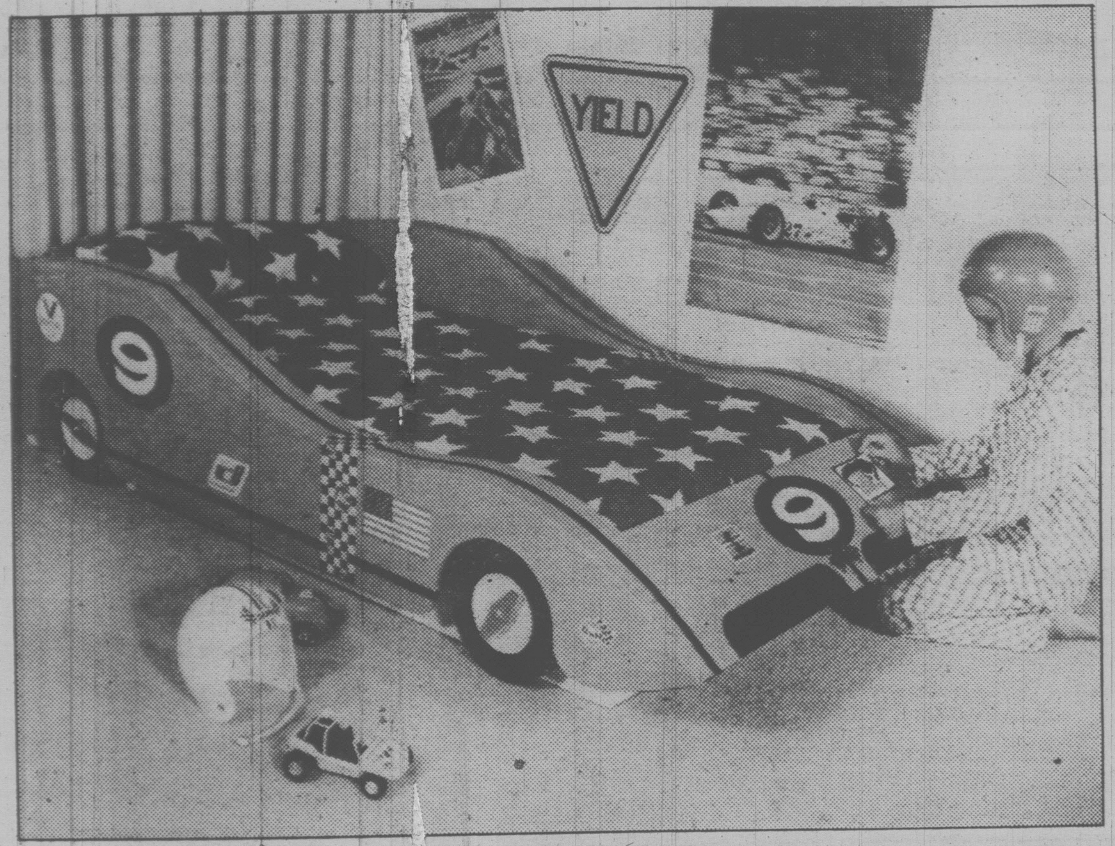
AN ADVERTISING SUPPLEMENT TO THE VICTORIA TIMES, JAN. 25, 1980

Send for plans to make this "bedmobile" for junior



YOU CAN MAKE IT!

It takes an ordinary size mattress. Wheels are 'pretend'

By Steve Ellingson

To make it run, just add one child and a dream. Here's a bed you can create that's sure to make ''bedtime!'' an irresistable call to the young set.

In fact, once you put it in that bedroom, you may have created a built-in babysitter. It looks for all the world like a sleek racing car, and you can make it as authentic as you want. Just add touches like decals.

The plan includes a big painted number on the sides and front of the car. The mattress is a standard size.

Built principally of plywood, the bedmobile is of sturdy construction. Those hot-looking wheels are there for looks only . . . the bed actually rests on a strong frame. The tires are easily made from several layers of plywood, rounded with a file. Paint the car with a few enamel coats of your child's favorite bright color and you've got a mean-looking candidate for any raceway.

To order the bedmobile pattern number 502, send $3.00 (please add fifty cents extra for postage and handling) by cheque or money order to: U-Build Patterns, Box 160, Cote St. Luc, Montreal, Que., H4V 2X3.

Revitalizing furniture Without stripping it

HAND AROUND THE HOUSE

Many a fine piece of old furniture has been laboriously stripped and refinished when the job wasn't really necessary. The result is a waste of time, energy and money, and the loss of a certain amount of authentic charm.

In many cases, all that work can be avoided simply by cleaning carefully. Years of sitting in an attic or basement can cover a piece of furniture with a dingy film of dust, grime, and mildew. Combine that with buildup of wax, or moisture that can soften old finishes, and the result looks bad.

Before you turn to stripper, try a solution of warm water and detergent. If the piece is solidly built, with tight joints and no veneers to come loose, attack it with a scrub brush. If it is more delicate, use a soft damp cloth so you don't oversoak it.Then rinse with clean damprags and wipe dry.

If the piece is especially dirty,combine a quart of hot water, three tablespoons of boiled linseed oil, and a tablespoon of turpentine. Use this solution and a rag to scrub off dirt and grime.The turpentine cleans while the oil combines with the varnish and revitalizes it.

Once you get a piece clean, you may discover that the finish is basically sound, but has a few small defects, such as white rings, cloudiness, dullness, etc. Often you can remove these defects without removing the whole finish.

Dullness: If thefinish is soft and gummy, there's not much you can do short of removing it. But if it's still hard, combine two parts boiled linseed oil and one part turpentine. Rub vigorously into the varnish with a rag. Then polish with a dry rag.

White spots. The standard treatment here is to rub with a fine abrasive and oil. You can use light machine oil such as 3-in-1 plus some cigarette ashes. Or you can use baby oil and powdered pumice or rottenstone (paint store items). Or you can use an automotive rubbing compound. In any case, rub the stuff over the white spot with a soft cloth and the damage should polish out. Be warned, however, that the treatment may make the repaired area glossier and smoother than the surrounding area. If that happens you may want to treat the whole surface to even things out.

Scratches: If a scratch is fine and doesn't go all the way through the finish, you can sometimes soften the finish with solvent and it will flow together to fill the scratch. use a fine artists brush to dab the solvent into the scratch. Try denatured alcohol first. If the finish is shellac the alcohol should work. If it doesn't, try turpentine. It should work if the finish is varnish. If neither of these two solvents works, try lacquer thinner. Lacquer thinnner is strong stuff and may damage the finish. Test it out on an inconspicuous part of the finish first.

Oriental rugs: hand or machine-made ?

By JOHN HEARN

My enthusiasm for oriental rugs dates back to a sunny and memorable day last summer when I saw a friend of mine pick up a 2'3'' x 4'6'' scatter rug at a garage sale for $8 — it was marked at $10 but my friend negotiated a better deal — and sold it an hour later to a dealer for $180. The dealer peeled the bills from a roll which he obviously kept handy in order to take immediate advantage of irresistible bargains.

I have been haunting garage sales ever since, lured by visions of discarded prayer rugs, but to no avail.

Collecting oriental carpets calls for more than luck — it requires money in denominations which trail out in a series of zeros.

The art of weaving itself has hardly changed in a thousand years. Rugs are still woven both by nomadic weavers and by skilled craftsman in towns and cities. The method is simple and never changes.

A loom consisting of two beams is set up. On to these is threaded the foundation of the carpet, the warp threads to which will be knotted the tufts which make up the pile. After each row of knots, transverse weft threads are inserted to hold the knotted pile firmly in place.

All oriental rugs are hand-knotted. The pile is made up of literally thousands of individual threads of yarn each tied on the warp, sometimes as many as a hundred to an inch. Once a row of knots has been completed, several weft threads are inserted and forced down with a comb-like instrument. The process is repeated over and over again. There are no short cuts.

The principle materials used are wool, cotton and silk — wool being the most commonly used. Also of great importance are the dyes which are vital to the creation of a fine rug. Most of the designs have been passed on from generation to generation and many have their own special symbolism and meaning.

The design in a rug is an influential factor in the assessment of the art of that rug — and consequently, its value. A good design contributes greatly to the value of a rug: a superb design, when all other factors are equal, elevates it to a masterwork. At this point you are clearly dealing with a work of art and great expertise is called for when thousands, or tens of thousands of dollars may be involved.

An assessment of the merits of a particular rug is only possible following a minute examination of the evenness of the weave, the coloring and design. Also by handling it and consciously feeling the quality of the pile you can get an understanding of the quality of the materials used. Only in rare circumstances is the name of the weaver known.

Obviously knowledge is critical. It is perhaps not too difficult to spot a genuine oriental rug at a garage sale — given the unlikely chance that one will ever appear at such a place again. Look at the back. Machine made rugs reveal a dead even weave. You can see at a glance the 'man' behind the shuttle was a computer. Hand-made rugs are not mechanically perfect. You can see this again on the front where matching patterns are often minutely different.

That, perhaps is sufficient knowledge to risk an $8 purchase but more orthodox transactions call for a different level of expertise.

Anyone living within shouting distance of Toronto should take advantage of the free lecture series given every month by Lidchi International of Yonge Street (Phone 922-5111 for details). The short course includes a color film about rug weaving and provides an opportunity to see and handle many rugs of different kinds and to talk with members of their staff. Lidchis have been known to conduct seminars in other parts of the country at the same low price. Obviously, the further away you live, the greater the number of people they like to talk to.

Otherwise, you can consult your Yellow Pages and remember Hearn's Fourth Law — "Beware evasive dealers." Good dealers in any of the fine arts will take a great deal of trouble to help you to understand what you are buying. Poor dealers go to the same amount of trouble to confuse you.

Why Trounce Alley ?

Trounce Alley connects Broad and Government Streets in the block between View and Yates. It was name for Thomas Trounce, an architect and contractor, who arrived in Victoria in 1858 after adventuring in the gold fields of Australia and California.

He put up many of the pioneer buildings in Victoria, including a large stone home on Michigan Street in James Bay, where he died at the age of 87, in 1900.

In a day when politics was a rough and tumble business, Trounce took an avid interest in it.

What 3 professional chefs want in their kitchens

By PATRICIA WELLS

NEW YORK — Above all else, insists Maurice Moore-Betty, a kitchen must be sensible. Sturdy restaurant-style cooktops. Unfussy pots. A refrigerator wide enough to hold a whole fish. For Giuliano Bugialli, practicality is important, but not primary. Walnut cabinets, handmade tiles, counters of Italian marble create a showcase for a life's collection of Florentine antiques. To Sherry Zitron, the essential kitchen is maintenance-free, with Formica countertops, easy-on-the-feet vinyl squares, fingerprint-proof matte-finish cabinets and self-cleaning ovens.

Most cooks have definite views about the design of their kitchens. But perhaps no one feels more strongly about how a kitchen looks and works than those who cook for a living. For Manhattan cooking instructors like Moore-Betty, Bugialli and Mrs. Zitron, the kitchen lights rarely dim. A teaching kitchen serves as office, classroom and a place for personal pleasure as well as entertaining. The design elements had better work.

The home cook can learn from the decisions the three professionals made during recent renovations because the same organizational principles apply, if on a smaller scale. Whether designing on one's own, or with the help of an architect or kitchen planner, every centimeter must be considered in a successful kitchen. Here is what the three professionals considered essential:

COOKTOPS AND OVENS

"There is absolutely no substitute for a professional range," said Mrs. Zitron, who recently renovated her 16-by-21-foot apartment kitchen. Although she had to widen the doorway to get her stove in, Mrs. Zitron chose a six-burner, South Bend professional range with a 30-inch gas oven. She prefers an electric oven for baking, so installed a double Thermador wall oven. For demonstrations, she added a two-burner Dacor electric cooktop, which her children use on weekends for making pancakes and omelets.

Moore-Betty solved a number of space and design problems in his 13-by-14-foot carriage house kitchen by installing six professional Wolf gas burners, strung out in a row along his major work island. "It's marvelous," he said, "you're never bending over one pot to get to another." Like Mrs. Zitron, he is partial to electric ovens and chose the same Thermador double wall unit.

Bugialli also selected a combination of professional and standard equipment: a pair of four-burner Tappan gas cooktops with a single General Electric wall oven nearby. His Garland professional range provides another six burners, as well as a large single oven.

REFRIGERATORS

Two of the three professionals insisted upon a Sub Zero refrigerator, which is shallower and wider than other household models. "Last weekend, I catered a party for 150, and it held all the food, with a few inches of space left over for my family," said Mrs. Zitron, who also chose a companion Sub Zero freezer. Moore-Betty said his 24-inch-deep Sub Zero means "never again do I have to lose a bottle of catsup in the back of the refrigerator." Its 32-inch width means that it can hold huge platters that don't fit in conventional refrigerators.

When Bugialli designed his new 20-by-36-foot dining-kitchen, he created a work area and a clean-up area and installed one refrigerator in each. A double-door General Electric refrigerator-freezer was built into the clean-up pantry.

CLEAN UP

For those who spend many hours in the kitchen, the sink's placement, construction and size are of utmost importance. Each of the three professionals chose stainless steel for its cleaning ease and durability.

Bugialli put a tiny bar sink in the middle of his work area; the clean-up pantry, out of view of students and guests, has a large sink, a single dishwasher, a trash compactor, a washer and dryer.

Mr. Moore-Betty installed a double sink with two faucets, more convenient when there's more than one cook in the kitchen. A Kitchen-Aid dishwasher is on the left side of the sink.

Mrs. Zitron wanted two sinks but, reluctant to give up counter space, she selected one double sink and added a Kitchen-Aid dishwasher at either side.

STORAGE

Each professional took a casual, yet organized approach to storage. Except for a food processor, blender and Kitchen-Aid mixer, the trio generally looked askance at cluttering the countertops.

Moore-Betty had foot-deep shelves built along a dining room wall, giving him space to house his antique china and glassware. Pots hang along one long wall, while knives and pot lids are stored on a portable butcher block cart. There are special shelves for knives and spices.

Mrs. Zitron likes a look that's clean but not clinical. Almost everything is stored in her custom-made, white Formica cabinets, with one special drawer set aside for knives and another for commonly used utensils.

Bugialli's kitchen is the most austere, with virtually every knife, glass and pot hidden inside walnut cabinets. In the pantry, a set of 50 Italian pottery apothecary jars, line the shelves, storing his grains, herbs, spices, tea and coffee.

Redecorating bathroom easy

Sometimes just new fixtures — faucet handles, etc. — will give a great new look to the room.

Repeat the theme of Early American with wood cabinets, counters and paneling, or enjoy theelegant look of Lous XIV with delicate flowered wallpaper, gold fixtures for the sink and marble counter tops. A miniature chandelier will add the final touch.

Many people like the "seashore" theme in a bathroom, decorating the room in blue with seashells and fishnet on the walls, blue wallpaper, even an aquarium on a stand

The bathroom is small enough, usually, that you can completely change its theme easily and often — without it being a major expense.

While you may not want to or be able to afford a redecorating of your living room or dining room, for example, the bathroom can be restyled with just a different color of towels particularly if you've kept the walls white or a plain brown.

If this is the case, and you've lots of colour leeway, you may want to keep several sets of towels in different colors and "recycle" the color scheme depending on the time of year.

If the walls, floor and fixtures are white or some other neutral color, towels will make a great change.

In winter, add red towels, area rug and hand soap for a warm look.

A new look for spring and summer could be with green, yellow or blue: they're cool colors — which are great for warm weather.

For fall, change to rust, orange or brown. Like the colors of falling leaves, these colors add warmth without being "hot" like red.

It can be a lot of fun to put your talents to work decorating the bathroom. Try it and see!

Q. We've just moved into a home that needs some fixing up. We will have a very small budget when it comes to decorating our bedrooms but I want them to be attractive.

I am most concerned about how to decorate my son's room. He's 6 and has a rather spacious room but no furniture except a bed and two old chests. — R.N.

A.Start with an inexpensive wallpaper to add drama and decorating inspiration to the room and establish a color scheme. Or if you'd prefer, give the walls a couple of coats of a neutral off-white and try your hand at painting a mural or some of his favorite figures.

Choose a warm but medium to deep tone for his carpeting — rust is an especially functional and pleasant shade.

Add some drama to his bed by the impressive use of fabric. Tent the headboard of his bed with two contrasting solid colors of fabric (sheeting is often economical for this use) and staple corners at the top of the bed and sides.

Add an inexpensive split bamboo shade at the window.

Paint the old chest colors from your wallpaper.

Other inexpensive but very useful furnishings are a practical army cot window seat that can double for an overnight friend, and a director's chair, both in bright-colored canvas.

Q. Our condominium has a small living room. I'm going to wallpaper the walls in a lovely golden green and white floral print which has a matching linen and a sheer.

What should I choose for the sofa, draperies and carpeting to make the room seem as large as possible and yet have an inviting atmosphere? — N.W.

A. When the same print is used throughout it gives the room unity.

Use the matching sheer fabric at your windows, the linen print on a sofa and chair.

For your carpeting look for a very soft version of the golden green in your fabric design. This color carpet, with perhaps a high-low effect, will give you a pleasant blending of the colors you are using and make the room seem larger than it actually is. White accents would add a crisp touch.

Q. I'd like to make some foam furniture for my apartment because I have seen some in pictures and like it because of the looks and because I have almost no money with which to furnish my place.

Do you know where I might find patterns or ideas for modern, do-it-yourself furnishings ?— Y.B.

A. Check in your local library for a copy of "Bright Ideas for Your Home" by Per Dalsgaard and Elisabeth Erichsen (published by Harper nad Row, $14.95). The 170-page volume is filled with great modern ideas with tremendous decorating power.

There are directions for making quilted bedspreads and a matching floor mat, curtain-enclosed four-poster beds, deck chairs that qualify as works of art and dozens of foam-filled chairs, sofas and lounging furniture.

PLAN OF THE WEEK

Plan Number: 11281A

The split entry design continues to be in great demand across Canada, and this commodious three-bedroom version offers an exciting exterior and an excellent interior floor plan for the medium-size family who have acquired a medium frontage building lot.

The pleasing exterior, finished in stone veneer, chimney, horizontal channel siding, shutter-accented windows and shake roof, will be a welcome addition to any urban or ex-urban residential development.

The arched, double-doored entry leads into a spacious reception foyer, from whence either up to the main living level or down three steps to the unfinished lower level. The main landing leads naturally left into the large and convivial living room, which features a raised-hearth masonry fireplace and excellent view and natural lighting through the wide front windows.

The well-planned U-shape kitchen-nook combination separates from the formal dining room via convenient pocket door for easy access. It has an excellent work triangle and generous countertop work surfaces. The nook invites built-in banquette furnishings, but will also accommodate more traditional dining units.

All three bedrooms are positioned on the upper level, around the central bath and linen storage. Each has generous closet storage and excellent natural light. The large master has a two-piece ensuite, and the second bedroom has a convenient built-in vanity sink.

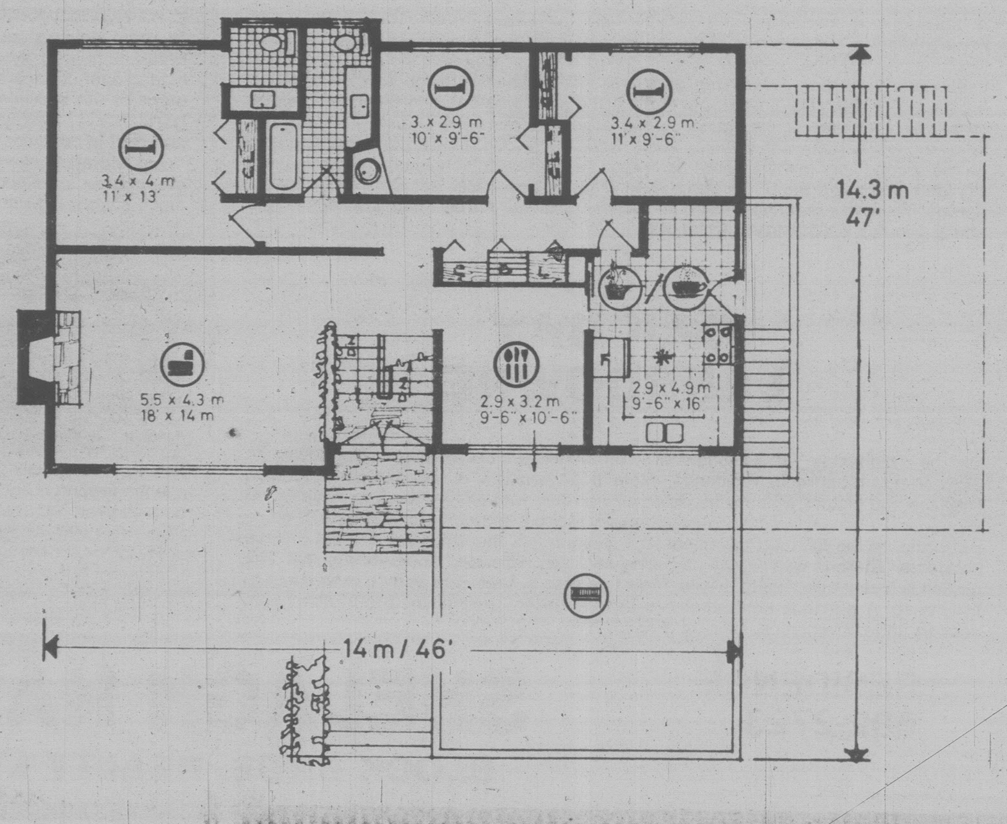
The unfinished lower level provides abundant space for the future development of additional bedrooms or recreational facilities. A roughed-in raised-hearth fireplace for a rec room, roughed-in three-piece bath, and space for a utility room and workshop, complete the convenience features of this practical and appealing design.

Plans for design No. 11281A may be purchased either by the single set, at a cost of $85.00 for the first set and $14.00 for each additional set, or by the package. A five-set plan package, including the first set, is economically priced at $120.00 and an eight-set package, also including the first set, is only $150.00.

Whichever method you choose, please include $5.00 for postage and handling. B.C. residents add 4% sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs magazine, Series 42, featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas, plus 320 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.75 ($2.00 plus 75 cents postage and handling).

To order any of these items please send cheque or money order payable to the Home of the Week. Address to: Home of the Week, 382 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C., V5Y 1R2.



What's the very least amount of money you need to get into a house of your own ?

By ANNE SWANNELL

A "cheap house" today has been defined as housing under $80,000. However, though the price of houses is escalating rapidly, it is still possible to buy a house under $50,000.

There are about thirty to thirty five homes under that price available on multiple listing in the Greater Victoria area, and, one realtor estimates, possibly double that number listed exclusively.

Some realtors say that there is "simply nothing available of quality at less than $60,000 on today's market".

However, a glance at the current multiple listing book (which your realtor will have, but which may not be loaned out to prospective buyers, so as to protect the privacy of those who have homes listed in it, where mortgages and other personal financial matters are mentioned) would show that there is a variety of houses available in the mid forties, and even a few at less than that.

Several types of houses fit into this price range. They could be very small, even tinier than an apartment in town, but perhaps neat and well cared for. Some houses are perfectly all right, but they are on 25 foot lots, which means, if they ever burned down, couldn't be re-built under today's building regulations, which state that a building lot must be at least 6,000 square feet. These houses will sell for less money. Or a house could be bigger, older, and need a lot of TLC or rennovation to bring it up to par. Or, the reason the price is low could be that the house is fine but it's near an industrial or semi-industrial area. Or it could be on an extremely busy street.

So, if you aren't looking for the impossible, but want "basic shelter" or something you can do some work on, you can still get in for less than $50,000.

Just how cheap is "cheap" these days ?

Area has the biggest effect on price. Oak Bay is the most wanted location. Fairfield is the next most popular area because it has character homes, attractive residential aspect, and yet is close to town.

A small cottage in Fairfield that has only two bedrooms, a living room and a kitchen, is on the market for $69,000 today. If the same house were in Victoria West, the asking price would be far less. Obviously, one can buy more house in Colwood than one can in Oak Bay for the same money, because land value there is so much higher.

The most-recently published (quarterly) issue of Properties SOLD on Multiple Listing shows the kind of houses that have sold recently for less than $50,000.

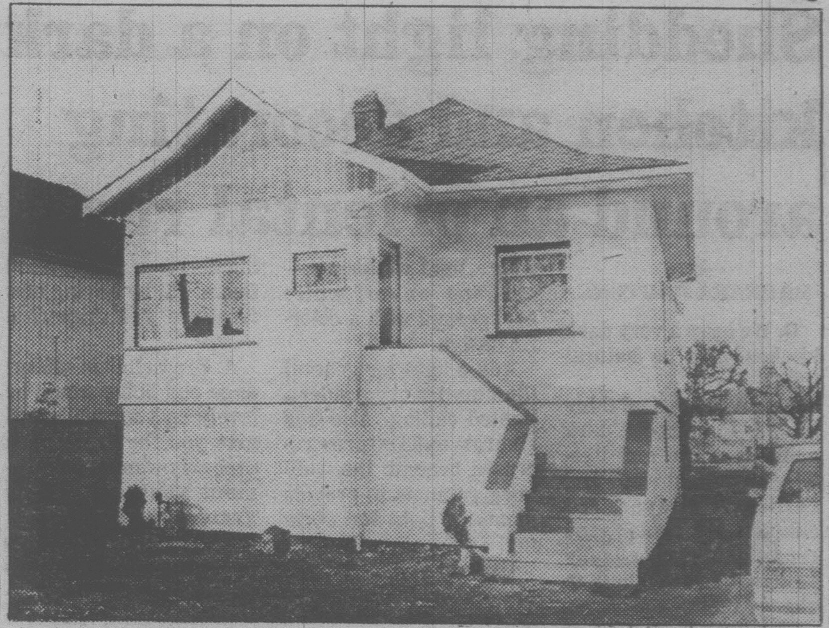
For example, in the Gorge area, a cedar siding bungalow built in 1911 went for $47,000 just before Christmas. It had a fireplace in the living room, dining area in the kitchen, a four piece bathroom, and three bedrooms, as well as a partial basement. The house had been up-dated and creatively rennovated, offered privacy, fruit trees, and a good vegetable garden.

A house on Lampson Street, in the same general area, sold for only $32,000. The owners were asking $37,000. It too, was an older bungalow, with a separate drive-in garage. It was neat and clean, and in good condition, comprising living room, kitchen, two bedrooms, three piece bathroom.

In Sooke, back in September, one could get a retirement stucco bungalow on a corner lot, absolutely spotless, with two bedrooms, for only $39,000. Prices are somewhat higher three months later.

An up-dated two and a half bedroom home in Saanich West, with new furnace, wiring, and kitchen sold for $44,000 last fall. It had a fireplace in the living room, eating area in kitchen, hall plan, three bedrooms, laundry in six-foot basement, three piece bathroom.

In the most recent Multiple listing book, there are 18 homes under $50,000 for sale in Victoria and Vic West, three in Esquimalt/View Royal, one in Oak Bay, three in East Saanich, eight in West Saanich, two on the Saanich Peninsula, four in Colwood/Langford/Metchosin areas, three in Sooke.



OWNERS ASK $49,900
This house in the Haultain district has two bedrooms, separate dining room, full seven-foot high basement. Built in the 1930s, but completely rennovated, the house was recently painted inside and out.

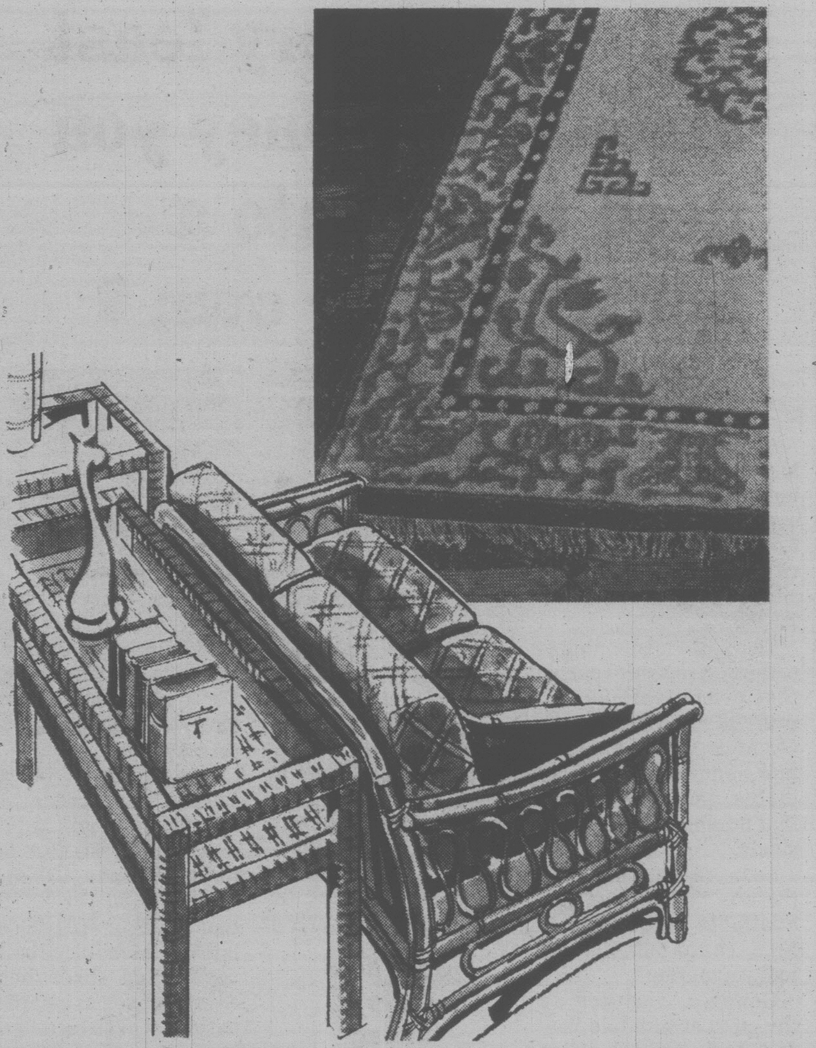
Shedding light on a dark kitchen and decorating around an oriental rug

By
BARBARA HARTUNG



Q. We have a very dark kitchen with no natural light.

I know the logical thing to do is to paint the dark cabinets white and likewise have light walls and ceiling. However, the cabinets are in such good condition and practically new that I really hate to change them.

The floor is in need of replacement and the walls need painting. What would you suggest? — T.P.M.

A light floor — perhaps an off-white pebbly texture or a simulated brick — would be a good beginning for lightening the room.

Add light and crispness to the walls and ceiling with a light wallpaper — perhaps an off-white background with a colorful design.

Add a light for general illumination or consider a lighted ceiling. Also add fluorescent fixtures recessed beneath the wall-hung cabinets to provide plenty of light for working.

Use reflective materials whenever possible — materials that will catch the light and bounce it about.

Q. I just bought a most beautiful Oriental rug in soft orange, navy blue, light blue and cream. I have a very small living room in which I want to use it and decorate around it.

I'd like a fairly dramatic, warm and inviting setting for the rug. Please sugget some colors and other ideas for highlighting the room. I have wood floors. I'll be buying new furniture and draperies. — P.P.

A. Grasscloth in soft orange and beige would be lovely on your walls and give you the drama you probably want to complement your rug. Many grasscloths today offer several colors — often a background color such as the soft orange and a natural beige grass. Look for the same soft orange Venetian blnds and if you want to enhance the Oriental effect, install a modest lambrequin at the window covered in the grass cloth.

A navy and cream fabric in a small print for a small sofa would be pleasant when combined with a pair of faux bamboo or wood and cane seated chairs. You could add blue cushions if the chairs demanded them.

What does a heat pump do ?

When adding a heat pump to a fossil-fuel heating system, it is recommended that you operate a heat pump as long as it can keep the indoor temperature at the desired level without the use of the furnace. It then automaticlly switches over to the fossil-fuel system when the heat pump can no longer handle the complete heating requirements. The idea is to provide economical heat pump operation and reduce home use of short-supply and/or expensive fossil fuels.

The heat pump principle may be new to many consumers even though it's not new in the heating and air conditioning industry. Basically, it is a central air conditioning system that can both heat and cool. In summer, it extracts heat from the air inside a home and pumps it to the outside, and in winter, extracts heat from the outside air, raises the temperature and distributes it inside the house.

The heat pump isn't magic, but it has the capability to pull enough heat from the outdoor air during much of the heating season to keep the indoor air comfortable. This is possible because even at cooler temperatures, there is still heat in the outdoor air — and the heat pump takes advantage of that heat.

Homeowners with existing electric furnaces may also benefit by adding a heat pump to their system. They can save considerably, when compared with forced-air electric resistance heating costs. Actual savings vary, of course, according to where and how you live.

Users can take advantage of heat pump economy in mild weather and use their electric furnace during low-temperature periods when the thermostat automatically switches on the furnace.

Gentlemen,

"Homes Today" has worked for me. The Lewis' recently from Calgary, and living in a motel, read my ad in "Homes Today". They phoned me and an arrangement was made to meet me at my Open House. They fell in love with the house and bought it that afternoon.

Out of the forty people that went through my Open House, at least thirty had read the ad in "Homes Today" - an outstanding response.

There are "4" more new homes being built on the same street as the Lewis's new home. I will most certainly advertise these and my other properties for sale in "Homes Today".

Yours truly,
